On many occasions during the month of January the right kidney could be felt to be movable. On January 28th Mr. Arbuthnot Lane saw the patient, and it was decided that the right kidney should be cut down upon. This was done on February 6th, and it was found to be freely movable. Mr. Lane stitched it into its normal position. The patient remained in the hospital till the end of April, but at no period was the urine observed to contain any bile, and he said that he never once passed any dark urine, nor was he ever jaundiced.

MEMORANDA:

MEDICAL, SURGICAL, OBSTETRICAL, THERAPEUTICAL, PATHOLOGICAL, ETC.

ON THE USE OF OXYGEN IN SEVERE BRONCHITIS.

Mrs. —, aged 56, whose illness commenced with an attack of influenza, followed by acute bronchitis, which, in the course of a week, brought her into a sinking condition, was seen at 7 P.M. on the seventh day. She was completely insensible, with great cyanosis of face, lividity of finger nails, irregular respirations, a very small compressible pulse—in fact, she was in extremis, and a consultation was suggested, and Dr. Lauder Brunton kindly came down to see her. I had previously given her an injection of ether, which improved the pulse a little. At Dr. Brunton's suggestion a hypodermic injection of strychnine was given in both arms, and two cylinders of oxygen procured for inhalation, which was given by means of a glass tube in the mouth; but very little hope was entertained of her recovery.

I saw her again in two hours' time, when the cyanosis had disappeared, but she was still quite insensible. In three hours' time she became conscious, asked where she was, recognised her son, and, in fact, made jocular remarks to a lady friend, and very much objected to having a glass tube in her mouth. An emetic of 30 grains of carbonate of ammonium was then given, which she had no difficulty in swallowing, but which, unfortunately, had no effect, as she did not seem to have sufficient strength to vomit. The patient lived through the night; on seeing her the following morning she had relapsed to her former condition. Some more strychnine was injected, and oxygen again inhaled, and her friends told me she again became conscious, sufficiently so to talk. I was called to see her again at 2.30, but found her dead. The supply of oxygen had run out. I took a fresh cylinder with me, but it was too late.

I think the chief interest in this case is in raising the question of possible recovery, when in articulo mortis from asphyxia, from accumulation of secretion in the bronchial tubes, as in this woman's case. I think if she had had sufficient strength to vomit after the emetic, and so cleared the air passages, she might possibly have recovered; but to watch the effect of the inhalation was simply marvellous; the woman seemed to come literally out of the jaws of death to life, although only to a very artificial life. Again, the question of temporary consciousness for signing a will or any legal document is of interest. The oxygen was obtained from the Oxygen Gas Works in Horseferry Road.

GOUT OF THE PENIS.

HAVING been much interested in the perusal of a case of gout in the penis, recorded by the President of the Clinical Society of London, January 8th, 1892, I am induced to forward a somewhat similar one, which occurred in my practice nearly thirty years since.

The patient was a captain in the Royal Navy, married, and near 60 years of age, and—singular to mention—I was called upon the following summer to attend him for a second attack, the penis then being the principal part that was mostly affected. It was greatly swollen, with priapism, there being so small an orifice for the escape of urine (phimosis) that I had to slit up the prepuce. The organ was enveloped in lint, kept constantly wet with a sedative lotion; it was very tense, and frightfully painful. The testes were unaffected. There was much ardor urinæ; at that time he did not complain of any particular uneasiness about any of the joints. Potas. bicarb. c. colchico et magnes. sulph. were given in frequent doses, so that the bowels were freely relieved. The diet consisted chiefly of milk gruel. The attack of urethritis was followed by a copious discharge of muco-purulent matter. Upon the fifth day of the attack the priapism yielded, after which pains of a slight and transient character were manifested. The patient had had occasional attacks of gout in the right foot.

At the time I considered the case somewhat unique, not having met with a similar one during twenty years' work. Rheumatism I have often witnessed attacking the testes, ending in urethritis. I regarded the case as one of gout attacking the penis, owing to the highly acid condition of the urine. No doubt having to relieve the phimosis at an early stage of the disease by operation contributed to a very great degree to the brevity of the attack, with the alkaline treatment then carried out.

MEDICAL & SURGICAL PRACTICE IN THE HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS OF GREAT BRITAIN, IRELAND, AND THE COLONIES.

WESTERN GENERAL DISPENSARY, LONDON.

A CASE OF EPIDEMIC DERMATITIS.

AFTER reading the paper by Dr. Savill on the Epidemic of Dermatitis noticed in the Paddington Infirmary,¹ I was at once struck by the resemblance of the symptoms described to those in the case of a woman I have lately had under treatment, and whose condition I have briefly described below. I think there can be no doubt that the patient was suffering from the same disease as that described by Dr. Savill. The patient lives in Lisson Grove, which is in the western district, outside of which district no similar cases have, I believe, up to now been recorded. I have seen no other case resembling this one amongst the patients attending this dispensary, and I could not discover any clue which would point to the disease being caused by contagion. During the course of her illness, neither the patient's husband nor any of her children suffered from any form of skin disease.

Two striking points in the case were, first, the great prostration caused by the disease; secondly, the ineffectual result of treatment, which consisted mainly of alkalies internally with sedative lotions and ointments to the affected skin. The patient was too ill to come to the dispensary; she was, therefore, visited at her home, which consisted of two very dirty rooms in a basement. The case is of interest from the fact that it proves that the epidemic was not confined solely to the local infirmaries, but that it also occurred in their neighbourhood.

Mrs. S., aged 40, has a family of seven children; the youngest was born in May, 1891. Her illness commenced at the end of June, 1891.

On August 26th, 1891, she came complaining of a rash accompanied by intolerable itching, sore eyes, debility, and loss of appetite. She was a fairly-developed and well-nourished woman. Her complexion was dark, and the face was rather puffy. The eyes watered freely; the conjunctivæ were swollen and inflamed, especially the palpebral portion, which had a dark crimson velvety appearance on eversion of the lids. The skin of the eyelids was rough and scaly. The forearms were covered with a fine scaly rash, the skin being somewhat brownly pigmented, surface rasping to the touch. The lower extremities, especially the legs, were in a very similar condition to that of the arms, but the rash was less marked and not so diffuse. The lungs and heart presented no abnormality.

September 1st. Face more puffy, moderate œdema of feet and ankles. Urine contains no albumen.

them, in substance, to expel any Member who should violate any by-law after giving notice and after hearing such Member. That provision in the charter of 1843 was not, in his judgment, limited to a case where letters testimonial and the diploma of the Member offending had been obtained by fraud or any offence analogous to that. He saw no ground for holding that that by-law was ultra vires and was not a valid and good by-law. He saw no ground from a legal point of view for holding that the Members of the College had any such rights as were sought to be declared by the statement of claim, and the whole action accordingly failed, and must be dismissed with costs.

Surgeon-General ABRAHAM GOODALL, F.R.C.S., late of the Madras Establishment, died at his residence, 4, Elvaston Place, S.W., on January 21st, in his 90th year.

The correspondent of the Times of India at Poona telegraphs on January 4th: Intimation has reached Poona that Surgeon-Captain J. HOLT, the medical officer of the 1st (Duke of Connaught's Own) Bombay Lancers, met with an accident on Wednesday, December 30th, 1891, which unfortunately proved fatal. Surgeon-Captain Holt was playing polo in a station game at Neemuch, where his regiment is stationed, and was galloping with his reins loosely held. The forelegs of the pony he was mounted on somehow got entangled in the hind legs of the pony which Lieutenant Beatty, attached to the same regiment, was riding, and came down. Surgeon-Captain Holt fell heavily to the ground, head foremost, his helmet having fallen off while he was coming down. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and conveyed to the Station Hospital, where it was discovered that he had fractured his skull. Despite all that medical skill could do, he gradually sank, and after lingering for about thirty hours, he died at 11.30 P.M. the following day, December 31st, much to the regret of his brother officers and others of the station, with whom he was very popular. Surgeon-Captain Holt's commission was dated October 1st, 1887. He was in the 27th year of his age.

MEDICAL NEWS.

NOTIFICATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES IN FRANCE.—The Lady Superior of a young ladies' school has just been fined by the Juge de Paix of Neuville (Rhône) for having neglected to notify to the authorities an outbreak of scarlet fever which had occurred in her establishment. The parents had not been informed, nor had the school been closed. It is disappointing to record that for so gross a disregard of the most elementary principles of hygiene—we had almost said humanity—the amount of the fine inflicted was only 1 franc.
