become easier, although such small fibroids and so situated as in these two cases must always be very difficult to diagnose. Much assistance is given by curving the intra-uterine finger well forwards and pressing the fundus down upon it by the right hand outside. For this purpose the patient should lie on her left side, as the recti muscles are thereby relaxed. It might be supposed that the anæsthetic would cause sufficient relaxation; but it often does not.

In conclusion, the advantages of the plan recommended are:

1. Danger from sepsis by the use of tents is avoided.
2. Inflammation, if rise of temperature with rigors and much pain indicate it—traumatic rather than septic—is also avoided.
3. The process, both to patient and operator, is more easy, and is incomparably quicker.
4. Less structural injury is done to the parts, as they dilate more kindly and without much resistance.
5. The dilatation is more complete and perfect, so that if used for dysmenorrhœa a permanent cure is more likely to result, and if for diagnostic purposes, examination is possible in cases in which otherwise it would have been impossible.

MEMORANDA:

MEDICAL, SURGICAL, OBSTETRICAL, THERAPEUTICAL, PATHOLOGICAL, ETC.

A STONE EMBEDDED IN THE ARM FOR SEVEN YEARS.

RECENTLY a man came to me complaining of most severe pain in his forearm. On examination I found the anterior aspect of the forearm to be very much swollen, livid, and indurated over a great area, at the centre of which was a small opening the size of a pin's head, about 4 inches from the bend of the elbow. He had met with a somewhat trivial accident some seven years previously: a fall while trying to escape from a shot about to be fired down a coal mine.

The result was a small wound on the posterior aspect of his forearm, which bled profusely at the time. He immediately proceeded to the colliery surgeon, who dressed the wound, which healed in the course of a few days. After that he returned to his work. In about two years he complained of pain at the seat of the old injury, and becoming unable to work, he again visited the surgeon, who painted the painful spot with various lotions and liniments, but without success. The patient, however, managed to go to work, off and on, until September, 1894, when he was forced to give up, owing to the most excruciating pain, sleeplessness, and anxiety.

He consulted various medical men, who advised rest and poulticing, but without success. When he came to my surgery I probed the pin head opening to the depth of 3 inches, and there detected a foreign body. I had to coax him for a long time before I could get consent to make an incision. After great deliberation he gave in, and the result was that I extracted, with a slight twist of the dressing forceps, an irregular piece of rock, which had become rooted in the depths of the forearm; it weighed 11½ grains, was half an inch long, and three-eighths of an inch broad in its widest dimensions.

I dressed the wound with antiseptic dressings for five weeks, when it healed up well. The man has since resumed his duties with no ill effects, except that he has had a very slight tingling sensation in his little finger and half the next finger, the area which is controlled by the ulnar nerve. I attribute the tingling sensation to a slight twig of that nerve becoming attached to a little puckering at the corner of the wound.

I think the foregoing case deserves mention for the following reasons: First, that the patient was able to work off and on for years; and, secondly, that the removal of the fragment of rock should occur at the end of the seventh year.

THE ADJUSTMENT OF AN ARTIFICIAL NOSE.

THE case described by Mr. Arthur S. Underwood, in the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL of June 1st is very similar to one I undertook many years ago, at the request of Mr. Skey. The disease had been the same, only more severe, as the whole of the nose had been lost with some portion of the face as well. The patient, also a female, came to me wearing an artificial nose constructed of very thin metal, and retained in the usual manner by spectacles. The pressure of the latter caused soreness and at times ulceration of the skin. My method of procedure was somewhat different from that adopted by Mr. Underwood. I constructed a model of the parts, to which I adapted a cast of a nose from the human face, and thus obtained a vulcanite representative which adapted itself accurately to the face and caused no inconvenient pressure whatever.

There was an element of the comic in my case. First, the patient insisted on having a nose of the perfect Grecian type, though I felt confident that hers, like her twin sister's, had been decidedly retroussé; however, I was able to accommodate her. The colouring of the appliance was kindly undertaken for me by a friend, a portrait painter of some eminence, who told me it was the most difficult nose he had ever attempted to paint. He succeeded admirably; but still there was this defect: If the lady, as she often did, became flushed, the nose appeared distressingly anæmic; on the other hand, if she became pallid, the nose then looked—well, almost suspicious! However, I think I may say that both Mr. Skey and the patient were fairly well satisfied.

ALFRED COLEMAN, F.R.C.S. Eng.

A NOTE ON THE ETIOLOGY OF APPENDICITIS.

AMONGST the numerous causes which have been given as directly or indirectly leading to inflammation of the vermiform appendix no decided question of heredity has arisen. Yet if the large amount of lymphoid tissue in the appendix predisposes to inflammation of its lining membrane, knowing the hereditary tendency of lymphoid tissue to become inflamed, heredity may play a not unimportant part in appendicitis. There is, moreover, I believe, much truth in the idea which regards persons liable to sore throat, and overgrowth of lymphoid tissue there, as liable to appendicular mischief, and tendencies to throat affections of this nature are certainly hereditary.

The following cases, occurring in one family in my practice, are in this connection worthy of note. The father, whose family history was good, died from diabetes mellitus when the youngest patient was 14, and suffered for many years from repeated attacks of what was apparently appendicular colic, but no post mortem examination was allowed. The mother is a healthy woman, but one of her sisters and one of her brothers died from phthisis and a child from tuberculous meningitis. The three patients now to be mentioned were fairly strong adolescents, without any rheumatic tendencies, living in a large house in comparative luxury.

C. Y., an athletic young man, aged 24, frequently has had simple pharyngitis; a severe attack of appendicitis, followed by slow convalescence, occurred in October, 1892.

P. Y., brother to the above, aged 21, also liable to pharyngeal catarrh. A moderately severe attack of appendicitis occurred in July, 1893.

M. Y., sister to the above, aged 21, has enlarged tonsils, and frequently has pharyngitis. Is now convalescing from a comparatively mild appendicitis.

"HERNIOTOMY UNDER DIFFICULTIES."

ON September 16th, 1894, last, when visiting a patient some dozen miles by train, I was asked to see "another case" about a mile distant in a very remote country spot. I found the patient, a widow, aged 62, suffering from symptoms of intestinal obstruction. The vomiting, which was almost incessant, set in on the evening of September 12th, and for the same period (96 hours) the bowels had been absolutely constipated.

In searching for a cause I found (for it was not visible) a left femoral hernia about the size of a bantam's egg, and presenting the usual signs of strangulation. The line of treatment was clear and delay meant death; skilled help was out of the question. Fortunately I had a fairly well furnished bag with me, and, having obtained the patient's consent, prepared to operate. The habitation was a dark thatched cottage, and, twilight coming on, the open air was chosen for place. My first difficulty was with the table, the top of which had to be taken off in order to get it outside. A small quantity of 1 in 20 carbolic which I had with me allowed the adoption of some antiseptic precautions.

The line of incision was frozen with chloride of ethyl, and so complete was the anæsthesia thus produced that after the skin incision had been made the patient complained that I had not begun. The various coverings were got through more by tearing with fingers and forceps than by cutting. Now, the one instrument was wanting—the herniotome. As a substitute I used the larger blade of my pocket knife. The edge and point of this were so blunt that, while it easily divided the thin rigid edge of Gimbernat's ligament the soft structures were not endangered.

The small knuckle of bowel was enveloped in such a thick layer of omentum that I decided not to waste time in exposing it, but it easily slipped back from beneath my fingers, and the omentum readily followed. No vessel required a ligature. The wound, after being mopped out with dry absorbent wool, was closed by a continuous suture to save time, dry lint dressing, and a pad and spica, completed the whole proceeding, which occupied a very few minutes only. For two or three days there was a good deal of vomiting, but it had not the character of the vomiting of obstruction, but was simply eructations of mucus without much effort, probably due to gastric catarrh set up by the foul matters which had been regurgitated from the bowels. The wound healed by first intention, and there was at no time elevation of temperature nor acceleration of pulse. In a couple of weeks the patient was wearing a truss, and in her usual health.

TATTOOING FOLLOWED BY ACUTE RHEUMATISM. IN THE BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL of June 1st appeared an interesting article on the inoculation of tuberculosis by tattooing, and in that connection the following case of rheumatic fever is perhaps worthy of record.

It presents three points of interest: First, the origin of the rheumatic attack in a septic inflammation the result of tattooing; secondly, the complications which arose; and thirdly, the question whether, in the experience of others, acute rheumatism has followed tattooing, and, if so, whether in such cases complications are relatively frequent. H. W., a militiaman, aged 17, was tattooed extensively on the left forearm; three days afterwards he complained of pain, swelling, and tenderness in the left wrist. The appearance of the joint and the recent marks of tattooing led to a diagnosis of inflammation due to septic absorption. On the fourth day he was taken with an acute left-sided pneumonia, and was removed to the Wycombe Cottage Hospital. The pneumonic inflammation rapidly subsided, and inflammation attacking in quick succession the left shoulder, knee, and ankle, with the detection of a cardiac bruit, rendered the rheumatic nature of the case evident. Chorea now complicated the case; limited for a time to the left side, it shortly spread to the right, where rheumatic inflammation was attacking the joints, the combination of the two being especially distressing to the patient. The joint inflammation, however, quickly subsided, leaving a general though mild chorea and a permanently damaged heart.

PROPOSED CONGRESS OF SURGERY AT BRUSSELS—There is some talk of organising an International Congress of Surgery, to be held in Brussels in 1897 coincidentally with the International Exhibition, which is to take place there that year. The proposal was discussed at a recent meeting of the Société Belge de Chirurgie, when an objection was made by some members that the International Medical Congress at Moscow fixed for the same date would interfere with the success of any similar meeting at Brussels. The matter has been referred to a committee.

HARTLEPOOLS HOSPITAL.

SUPPURATING KIDNEY REMOVED BY ABDOMINAL SECTION;

RECOVERY.

(Under the care of T. G. AINSLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., Surgeon to the Hospital.)

[Notes by A. V. MACGREGOR, M.B., C.M., House-Surgeon.]

E. P., aged 24 years, mother of four children, was admitted into Hartlepool Hospital on March 10th, under the care of Dr. Ainsley, complaining of pain in her right side.

History.—Seven weeks after her last confinement—that is, six months ago, she felt a pain in her right side of a dull, heavy dragging character, without exacerbations or paroxysmal attacks. The pain has never been absent a whole day, and is worse at night after her day's work, but subsided after a little rest, and her sleep was undisturbed. She has had profuse sweatings at night, and at the commencement of her illness she had an attack of sickness, and vomited almost everything she took for a fortnight. She has been gradually losing flesh and strength. At first the patient had to get out of bed once or twice at night to micturate. She has noticed that her urine is scanty and thicker than normal, but has not observed any blood nor any alteration in colour or smell. Three months ago she felt a rounded swelling in the upper part of the abdomen, at the right side, which has been getting larger. She has had slight cough and expectoration. There is no history of phthisis or other special diathesis.

State on Admission.—Face rather expressionless and somewhat emaciated; no evidence of dropsy or jaundice; skin feels damp and emanates an offensive odour, which persists even after baths; temperature 99°. Abdomen: A bulging forward to be observed in the right side below the liver. Palpation: A well-defined rounded tumour, tender to touch, extending from liver to 1 inch below umbilicus, outer border undefined and extending inwards to the middle line; it is slightly movable, no sense of fluctuation except in lower part, where it has a semifluctuating feel. The ascending colon can be detected passing up over the tumour, and from its lower border a thickened cord is felt in the line of ureter. Urine: Quantity per day varied from 30 to 40 oz., specific gravity 1025 to 1030, acid, contains a large quantity of pus and some albumen, no blood, examination for tubercle bacillus gave negative results. The alimentary, respiratory, circulatory, and reproductive systems gave no evidence of disease.

Diagnosis.—Pyonephrosis, probably tuberculous.

Operation.—An incision 4 inches long was made through the right semilunaris, and the peritoneum opened. The left kidney was examined, and the intestines packed away by a large sponge. The incision was now found to be much too small for the removal of the tumour; another was therefore made at right angles to the former, 5 inches in length, passing down into the flank. The posterior peritoneum was then divided on the outside of the colon, and separation from the front of the tumour commenced. This separation was tedious and difficult, as the peritoneum and colon were intimately adherent to the capsule, and the capsule to the kidney. By perseverance this was effected, not without in one or two places opening into the abscesses, but by sponge pressure I think pus was prevented entering the peritoneal cavity. Separation from the loin was easily accomplished; here the thickened ureter came into view; it was at once seized by two pairs of forceps, divided between, and the cut ends disinfected by the thermo-cautery. The distal end was brought out at the lower angle of the longitudinal wound, where it was fixed by a safety pin. The thick pedicle was then treated by passing a pair of Wells's forceps between the renal artery and vein, drawing through the ligature, and tying first the posterior then the anterior parts. The tumour was then removed, peritoneum flushed out with warm boracic solution, and dried with sponges. A glass drainage tube was placed in the abdomen, and a rubber one passed through the loin.

delicate test to denote conclusively cessation of the heart's action? In a doubtful case, say in a cat, we may experimentally test the point by means of a penholder with a needle at one end and a square of white paper at the other end, piercing the ventricle through the chest wall with the needle and watching the oscillations of the indicator, as being more delicate than the feeling of the pulse. We cannot apply such a test to the human subject. You quote a leading authority to the effect that "it is impossible to admit that the heart can remain for even half an hour in a state of absolute inaction in a human being and then spontaneously recover its activity." With this proposition I incline to agree, but, then, has any practitioner ever sat by the bedside of a dying patient with his finger on the pulse for half an hour? May pulsation cease for half an hour with the exception of some few fluttering beats at rare intervals which may be overlooked in the ordinary routine of practice? I once resuscitated a dog and kept it alive for four hours after "it was reported by one of the laboratory porters that the dog had been 'dead' for some time, probably for about fifteen minutes. The body was quite warm but respiration and circulation had certainly ceased, and the forelegs were stiff."—I am, etc.,

THE ETIOLOGY OF ENTERIC FEVER.

SIR,—In connection with the etiology of enteric fever in India there are two points which have lately been discussed. I shall feel grateful for a pronouncement on them.

1. Has the occurrence of cases of enteric fever ever been traced to an impure butter supply?

The evidence as regards milk being a carrier of enteric fever is now conclusive, but, as regards butter, I cannot discover that it has ever been proved responsible for an outbreak of enteric fever. I will put the case I have in my mind, as follows: A family draws its milk and butter from different sources. The milk is found to be above suspicion; the butter has been made from milk polluted by enteric fever dejecta. I have not the least doubt but that such butter would give enteric fever to those partaking of it, but I can find no evidence of an epidemic being so traced.

2. The milk-giving cattle in India are very foul feeders; it is by no means uncommon to see such cattle feeding on human dejecta.

We will suppose that such dejecta are derived from an enteric fever patient. What would the effect be on the milk of the cattle? Would their milk, however carefully drawn, be capable of originating enteric fever?—I am, etc.,

UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH.

The University Calendar for 1895-6 was published on June 25th. It has grown in bulk to the extent of 46 pages. The changes that bear on the medical profession will be fully set forth in the Educational Number of the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL.

The written examinations for final degrees (M.B., C.M.) in medicine took place last week, and since that time the visd voce examinations in the various systematic courses (medicine, surgery, midwifery, gynecology, hygiene, medical jurisprudence), as well as those in clinical surgery, have been going on. Among students there seems to have been general satisfaction with the fairness of the written papers. If an exception was made it was regarding the paper on medical jurisprudence and public health. As usual there was grumbling over the examinations in clinical medicine, one examiner being selected as the butt for most of the grumbling. This, unfortunately, is a chronic condition. How much there is in the mere mannerism of the examiner we are unable to say. So difficult, however, is examining, that one professor in the University of Edinburgh has been heard to say that men are not fit to examine, and that the angels should come down to examine for the final.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

The new charter granted by the Privy Council to the Senate of Durham University has been issued. The principal recital empowers Convocation to grant degrees (degrees in divinity alone excepted) to women, but that no female graduate of the University shall be a member of Convocation unless and until such Convocation shall have passed a regulation that female graduates be admitted to Convocation. At the Convocation on June 25th, when the new charter was received, the following honorary degrees were conferred: Hon. D. C. L. Sir John Stainer, Prebendary William Rogers (in absentia), Hon. D. Litt, John Bagnall Bury, Ingram Bywater, William John Courthope, Frank Byron Jevons, Frederick George Kenyon, and Hon. M. A. James Francis Hodgson.

THE IRISH COLLEGE OF SURGEONS AND THE APOTHECARIES. In view of the fact that the General Medical Council has reported the examination conducted by the Royal College of Surgeons and the Apothecaries' Hall in Ireland to the Privy Council, a letter has been addressed to the press by the heads of the former body. It is signed by the President, Mr. Thornley Stoker; the Vice-President, Mr. William Thomson; and the Secretary, Mr. R. H. Woods. It points out that the College gave notice last year to terminate the union at the end of the present month. The letter states:

"The examinations have been very closely inspected and freely reported upon. The last report of the visitors (April and May, 1895) describes the first professional examinations as 'a good and satisfactory test,' in the second the examination in anatomy and materia medica and pharmacy as 'commendable,' and of the third it declares that 'no exception could be taken to any part of this examination.'

"Of the final examination the visitor and inspector report an 'improvement generally.' At this examination the examiners in medicine are appointed by the Apothecaries' Hall and in surgery by the College of Surgeons. In all the other subjects save medicine, the visitors state that the examination was 'sufficient,' and of the examination in medicine it is right to say that the visitors differ from the examiners in one point only, and that they declare that the 'examination was a most careful one, and we believe was conscientiously conducted.'

"It was upon this report that the General Medical Council agreed to bring this conjoint scheme before the Privy Council as insufficient. What we desire to show is that the work of the College of Surgeons in this connection has been properly carried out, and to make it known that the partnership is on the eve of dissolution. There is no examination in the world with which faults of different kinds may not be found by so many different visitors. For many years the examinations of this College, as of all others in the United Kingdom, have been reported on, and we have received frequent commendations. The College endeavours to maintain a high standard. In certain senses its examinations are in advance of those of other countries, and in this last report we have again obtained the approval of the visitors.

"We ought, perhaps, again to point out that the union between the College of Physicians and of the College of Surgeons continues as before and that the examinations have been declared to be, in the words of the Act, 'sufficient.'

THE SOCIETY OF APOTHECARIES OF LONDON.

The following changes have taken place in the staff of Examiners of the Society of Apothecaries of London: Mr. Bilton Pollard has been appointed one of the Council Examiners in Surgery, vice Mr. A. Clark, who retires by rotation. Mr. C. B. Lockwood has been appointed one of the Society's Examiners in Surgery, vice Mr. Bilton Pollard. Dr. T. D. Savill has been appointed an Examiner in Medicine, vice Dr. F. Warner, who retires by rotation, and Dr. Leith Napier has been appointed an Examiner in Midwifery, vice Dr. Lewers, who retires by rotation. Mr. Stonham has been appointed an Examiner in Anatomy, vice Mr. C. B. Lockwood.

MEDICO-LEGAL AND MEDICO-ETHICAL.

AN EXCEPTIONAL CASE.

FAIRPLAY writes: A. and B. practise in a country town. Both get their practices by purchase. C. thinks there is an opening, and comes in without purchase, does cheap work, and after two years supplants A. A. gets ill, decides to leave the neighbourhood, and then sells his appointments, consisting of parish appointment, to C., the price to depend upon his getting appointed. The parish advertise. Is B. justified in applying for the appointment?

. Under the peculiar and exceptional circumstances related, we do not see any valid objection to B. applying for the parochial appointment in question.

GLYCOSURIA AND DIABETES.

X. writes that he was called in to see A. who was suffering from loss of flesh, great thirst, and very frequent micturition. The urine (specific gravity 1033) gave a positive reaction with Fehling's solution. Dietetic and medicinal treatment were continued for two months when general improvement and gain in flesh were noted. B. called on A., and, without examining the urine, told him that he (A.) was not suffering from diabetes; B. then attended A. regularly. C., a recently qualified gentleman and son of A.'s landlord, was asked to see A. for sudden acute pain and febrile symptoms. He examined the urine along with the county analyst, and gave a final and negative opinion based on that examination. X. asks (1) whether his treatment of twelve months ago might not have caused a temporary cessation in the excretion of sugar; (2) if certain febrile conditions might not bring about a similar result; and (3) for an opinion on the conduct of B. and C.

. It would have been desirable to know the age of the patient, the quantity of urine passed, and the number of times that X. obtained the reduction test. It would seem extremely improbable that in a genuine case of diabetes two months' dieting and treatment could have had anything to do with the absence of the glycosuria twelve months later unless the patient had continued the restricted diet, and of this X. has apparently no evidence. (2) In the event of certain febrile conditions the sugar might temporarily disappear from the urine, and thus a single examination of the urine at such a time could not be looked upon as conclusive. (3) If as stated B. called on A. and, after traversing the opinion of A.'s regular medical attendant, took on the case, he was obviously guilty of a breach of medical etiquette. The ethical conduct of C. seems to be beyond reproach. He was asked to see A. in the febrile attack, examined the urine thoroughly, and then gave his opinion. This opinion was, however, unwisely made to 'appear final,' as it was based on evidence at once slender and negative.

FRIENDLY RIVALS.

ENQUIRENS.—Irrespective of the ethical rule which governs the case, we would counsel our correspondent—in view of the fact that he regards his professional opponent as friendly, and, moreover, that he himself will probably sooner or later need a like kindly act during absence from home—courteously but firmly to decline to accept a personal engagement to attend the patient alluded to in her approaching confinement, and also to debit his attendance on the baby to the ordinary medical adviser; far better is it to lose a would-be patient than the friendly feeling of a brother practitioner.

VETERINARY PRACTICE.

RUSTIC.—In response to our correspondent's very exceptional question, we would earnestly counsel him, in his own true interest, to dissociate himself as far as possible from the veterinary practice referred to, and especially to abstain from accepting a fee therefor, otherwise it cannot in our opinion fail sooner or later injuriously to affect his position as a medical practitioner. Our emphatic advice, however, need not deter him from suggesting remedial measures in a case of pressing necessity, but in no wise should he hold himself out as a "vet." whose services are locally available or accept continuous charge of an animal.

GRATEFUL HUSBAND AND FATHER.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us the announcement of a birth, cut, as he informs us, from the Liverpool Daily Post of June 22nd. The first part of the announcement is of the ordinary kind, but appended to it in brackets is the unusual addition: "Both mother and child are doing well, thanks to Dr. J. B. Edis."

. We have described this advertisement as unusual, but we ought perhaps to have said that it was unprecedented. We can hardly suppose that Dr. Edis is in any way responsible for its appearance, but we think he would do well to remonstrate with the husband in order that it may become generally known that such announcements are contrary to professional etiquette and extremely distasteful to the medical men whose names may be mentioned in such a connection in the public press.

THE USE OF MEDICAL TITLES AFTER THEIR WITHDRAWAL.

THOMAS RICHARD ALLINSON, of Spanish Place, Manchester Square, appeared at the Marylebone Police-court in answer to summonses for using the description of L.R.C.P. and falsely using the title of licentiate in medicine. Mr. Muir Mackenzie, barrister, prosecuted; and Mr. Young, barrister, defended.

Mr. Mackenzie, according to the report in the Times, said that the defendant was, in 1870, registered in the Medical Register as L.R.C.P. Edin., and also L.R.C.S. Edin. On May 28th, 1892, his name was erased after an inquiry held under the Medical Act. He subsequently brought an action complaining of the decision of the Council, and it was dismissed in the High Court and also in the Court of Appeal. He had, however, until now held himself out as L.R.C.P. Edin., and also used the initials L.R.C.P. The defence was that there was no proof that the defendant had infringed the Act. The mere fact of the erasure of a person's name, or the loss of a degree, did not interfere with his practising as a medical man.

Mr. Bennett thought the case was a bad one, and said there would be a fine of £20, with £10 10s. costs, or in default of distress a month's imprisonment.

Mr. Young asked for a case, but Mr. Bennett refused to entertain the application.

fever and from "fever" showed no marked excess in any of the large towns. The 67 deaths from diphtheria in the thirty-three towns included 37 in London, 5 in Liverpool, 4 in Wolverhampton, and 4 in Birmingham. One fatal case of small-pox was registered in Liverpool and 1 in Oldham, but not one in London or in any other of the thirty-three towns. There were 22 small-pox patients under treatment in the Metropolitan Asylums Hospitals and in the Highgate Small-pox Hospital on Saturday last, June 22nd, against 22, 23 and 19 at the end of the three preceding weeks; 8 new cases were admitted during the week, against 1, 5, and 2 in the three preceding weeks. The number of scarlet fever patients in the Metropolitan Asylums Hospitals and in the London Fever Hospital, which had been 1,524, 1,589, and 1,637 at the end of the three preceding weeks, had further increased to 1,732 on Saturday last, June 22nd; 251 new cases were admitted during the week, against 187, 179, and 199 in the three preceding weeks.

HEALTH OF SCOTCH TOWNS.

DURING the week ending Saturday last, June 22nd, 979 births and 560 deaths were registered in eight of the principal Scotch towns. The annual rate of mortality in these towns, which had declined from 21.4 to 17.1 per 1,000 in the three preceding weeks, rose again to 19.4 last week, and was 3.2 per 1,000 above the mean rate during the same period in the thirty-three large English towns. Among these Scotch towns the death-rates ranged from 16.0 in Paisley to 24.3 in Greenock. The zymotic death-rate in these towns averaged 2.6 per 1,000, the highest rates being recorded in Perth and Greenock. The 259 deaths registered in Glasgow included 1 from small-pox, 4 from scarlet fever, 2 from diphtheria, 14 from whooping-cough, and 14 from diarrhoea. Two fatal cases of diphtheria were recorded in Edinburgh, and 4 of measles in Greenock.

THE "BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL" COMMISSION ON WORKHOUSE INFIRMARIES.

WE see that the respective Boards of Okehampton and Crediton Workhouses are setting to work in earnest to carry out the several improvements recommended in these columns. We do not in the least mind being called to account for "gross exaggeration and misstatements" when we see that our criticism is bearing fruit in stimulating the guardians to remove the various abuses that we have endeavoured to point out. We most sincerely hope that the Okehampton Board will not turn back from the intention of building a small infirmary for the sick. It is urged with much force that the cost of so doing would be distributed over twenty-five or thirty years, whilst any expenditure undertaken in altering the present building must be met out of the current rates or by means of a loan for a short period.

At the meeting of the West Derby Board of Guardians, held on June 12th, the chairman drew the attention of the guardians to a report which had appeared in the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL with regard to the management of the Mill Road Infirmary and the Test House in Belmont Road. He said that the criticisms, if he might so term them, were of the most favourable description, and they thoroughly complimented the guardians upon the management and arrangements. He considered that when such a journal chose to compliment they might well feel satisfied.

MEDICAL ORDERS FOR URGENT CASES.

C.L., who is a district medical officer, says he was requested by a man to visit his wife at night, four miles off. The patient was reported to be in labour, under the care of a midwife, and was supposed to be in imminent danger. Attendance was at once given, and the friends were informed that the case would be regarded as a pauper case, and that a medical order would have to be procured as early as possible the following morning. The patient was delivered by forceps, but only survived two hours. The case was reported in the ordinary way to the Board of Guardians, recognised by them as a pauper case, and this point not questioned till a claim was made for the extra fee for attendance, and the Finance Committee learned that no medical order had been given. The Board declined to pay the fee claimed.

C.L. asks: In the event of another similar case occurring, am I to wait a medical order to be procured, or what ought my procedure to be?

. We consider that C. L. would in the future be justified in requiring a medical order to be given before attending. In such a case as that described, this could be granted either by the relieving officer or by an overseer.

OBITUARY.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM C. WILLIAMSON, F.R.S.

THE death at Clapham Common, Surrey, on June 23rd, of Professor W. C. Williamson, Emeritus Professor of Botany in Owens College, removes a notable figure from the scientific world as well as severs the last link in the chain of those professors who entered upon their offices at the foundation of Owens College, Manchester. Dr. Williamson was a native of Scarborough, where he was born in November, 1816, so that at his death he had reached the ripe age of 78.

Young Williamson from his boyhood showed a great liking for natural history in the widest sense of the term. He acquired his knowledge by actual acquaintance with Nature in the fields and lanes around his native place. He was appointed Curator of the Scarborough Museum, where there still exists a collection of the fossils of the district which he found. He devoted much time to the study of the oolitic plants of the district, and furnished a description of these plants to the Fossil Flora of Lindley and Hutton. In 1832 he was apprenticed to Mr. Weddell, surgeon, of Scarborough. In 1834-36-38 he contributed papers to the Geological Society on the Stratigraphical Distribution of Fossils in Yorkshire. In 1835 he was appointed Curator of the Manchester Natural History Society, where he continued to pursue his medical studies. His removal to Manchester opened up a wide field of study, and he devoted his energies to the investigation of the coal measures of the district, more especially as regards their fossil remains of fishes and plants.

After three years he resigned the curatorship of the museum in order to complete his medical studies. He attended the Pine Street Medical School in 1838-39, then he studied at University College, London, and obtained the diploma of the College of Surgeons in 1840. In the following year he settled in Manchester, and was appointed Surgeon to the Chorlton-on-Medlock Dispensary. He was also largely instrumental in founding the Ear Institution, and was one of its surgeons for many years. He soon gained a large private practice, but even while so employed all his spare time was devoted to his favourite pursuits.

In 1842, at the Liverpool meeting of the British Association, he read a paper on the Origin of Coal. His microscope was his constant companion, and the contributions which he has made to our knowledge of the minute structure of fossil plants have made his name famous. The various memoirs which he presented from time to time to the Royal Society, and many of which are published in the Philosophical Transactions, were always beautifully illustrated by drawings made by himself. He was an excellent draughtsman, and these papers are accepted as standard works on the subject of which they treat. He contributed a remarkable paper to the Royal Society on the scales of fishes, some of which are bony, and he there carefully studied the process of ossification. In 1854 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and for his contributions to fossil botany he was awarded a Royal Society medal in 1874. In 1851, on the foundation of Owens College, he was appointed to the Chair of Natural History. For a considerable time he was called upon to teach botany, zoology, geology, anatomy, and physiology. Then a separate Chair of Geology was instituted, to which Professor Boyd-Dawkins was appointed, and subsequently the Chair of Zoology was founded, which left him free to devote his time to botany.

During all these years he carried on his medical practice, and was largely consulted on diseases of the ear. He had studied this subject under Dr. Menière, of Paris. Afterwards he relinquished practice, and devoted all his time to the duties of his chair and to the patient and painstaking study of the plants of the coal measures. He made a remarkable collection of these fossil plants, which is preserved in the Owens College Museum. In 1892 he resigned his chair and settled near London.

Williamson was a grand type of the all-round naturalist who gained his knowledge by a close study of Nature. He was an accurate and careful observer, and worked with both enthusiasm and endurance. He was also a splendid lecturer both ex cathedra and on the platform. For many years he gave lectures for the Gilchrist Trust, and wherever he went he was sure of a large and appreciative audience, for he had the art of treating his subject in a popular and attractive manner. The Geological Society awarded him the Wollaston Gold Medal in 1890; the University of Edinburgh in 1883 conferred on him the degree of LL.D., and he was a member of several Continental scientific societies. His death will be deeply and sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends, for he stood out as a striking and robust personality both physically and mentally.

PRESENTATION.—At a well-attended meeting held June 21st at the Kensington Town Hall under the presidency of the Marquis of Lorne, Mr. John Jones Merriman, M.R.C.S., was presented with an illuminated album, together with a cheque for £1,000 and a bracelet for Mrs. Merriman on the occasion of his terminating his long connection with the parish of Kensington, where for upwards of a hundred years the succeeding generations of his family have been prominent among the local medical practitioners. The Marquis of Lorne, in making the presentation, read an address, which stated that for more than a century Mr. Merriman's family had been associated with the names of the benefactors of the parish, and prominent in many good works of philanthropy and charity. Mr. Merriman himself had won the good opinion of all, and his personal and professional friends could not allow him to leave his old home without some recognition of the real regard in which he was held. The album and cheque were then handed to Mr. Merriman and the bracelet to Mrs. Merriman. Mr. Merriman expressed his thanks to the numerous subscribers.

PROFESSOR GOTCH, the newly appointed Waynflete Professor of Physiology, was entertained at a farewell dinner by his colleagues and friends in Liverpool, at the Adelphi Hotel, on June 21st. Russell, Mr. George Holt (the founder of the Chair of Physiology), Dr. Caton, and a large gathering of professors of University College, and of members of the medical and other professions in Liverpool. Principal Rendell, in proposing the health of the guest of the evening, spoke in warm terms of appreciation of the great service Professor Gotch had rendered to the school of medicine during the four years he had been associated with it, and Professor Gotch in his reply expressed the regret he felt at severing his connection with his work and many friends in Liverpool. Towards the close of the evening a choice selection of music was rendered by Professor Kuno Meyer, Dr. Karl Grossmann, and Mr. Welsing.

A SCHOOL OF MEDICINE FOR WOMEN IN ST. PETERSBURG.—On May 4th the question of the establishment of a school of medicine for women in St. Petersburg was discussed by the Russian State Council, which decided in favour of the proposal. The want of money has hitherto been a stumbling block, but now, thanks to the liberality of private individuals, the financial difficulty no longer exists. The details of the scheme have already been arranged. The curriculum is to be in all respects the same as that in the medical faculties of the universities, and will extend over five years. Women under the age of 21 will be admitted only on the written permission of their parents or guardians; married women must produce a written permission from their husbands. No one will be admitted unless she shows evidence of knowing Latin and Greek to the extent required in the gymnasium for boys. A director of the school will be chosen by the Minister of Public Instruction from among the Professors of the University faculties. The director will be under the authority of the Council of Professors, of a School Committee nominated by the Warden of the St. Petersburg Academic District, and of an Administrative Committee appointed by the Minister. Women holding the diploma granted by the school will not be eligible for the post of director of any general hospital.
