2. Decrease in the size and number of granules; their paler tint; diminished density in the rim of the colonies.

3. Disintegration of the granules and loss of consistence, as evidenced by their more easy dispersion by pressure on the cover glass.

4. A gradual clearing and disappearance of clubs. Except during the exhibition of the iodides, there was always an abundant and characteristic arrangement of clubs.

5. To these may be added the absence of cicatricial indurations and granulomatous masses, so characteristic when the disease reaches the surface.

Dr. West⁵ mentions a fatal case of actinomycosis treated with large doses of potassium iodide, with absence of skin affection. Dr. Barton⁶ says, "The tumours considerably diminished under large doses of potassium iodide." Dr. Pringle⁷ says, "Skin lesions have markedly improved, having withered and flattened down to skin level."

I have heard of other cases since, in which similar effects were observed. Therefore the absence of cicatricial thickenings and granulomatous masses is coincident with the exhibition of large doses of potassium iodide. It is, further, a significant fact in the present case that after the exhibition of large doses of the iodides, the disease did not invade adjacent organs, nor were there any secondary deposits, a most exceptional condition considering the locus of the malady and the time it had existed. Cultivation of the fungus was tried by several experts without effect.

The granules were bathed in the profuse serous discharge, following the full doses of the iodides; the fungus was robbed of its food and its vitality lowered by the resolution of the inflammatory deposit. I think, then, we are justified in saying that the curative effect of the iodides in actinomycosis is corroborated by this case.

With reference to the relative action of the compounds of potassium and sodium, it is important to note that, whilst the potassium salt is more diffusible than the sodium iodide, it is much more poisonous to nerve fibre, nerve centre, and muscle, and more irritating to the gastro-intestinal tract. Therefore where there is much tissue waste or gastro-intestinal irritability, it may be found safer and as efficacious to give the iodide of sodium.

Cures are reported⁸ by parenchymatous injections of 1 per cent. solutions of the iodides of potassium and sodium. In this case the douching by 2 per cent. solutions of potassium iodide produced no marked effect, probably on account of the fluid running over the deposit without penetrating it to any extent.

Very definite results followed the spirit applications. These were:

1. Great power of penetrating and cleaning the burrows and abscess cavity.

2. Dehydrating and coagulating effect on albuminous substances, causing the deposit to come away in masses.

3. Germicidal action.

There being no evidence of the ray fungus at the "sectio," it seems that the fierce battle between the besieged and his assailant ended in the almost simultaneous destruction of both.

A CASE OF ECZEMA TREATED BY THYROID EXTRACT.

ON March 12th I was called to see Mrs. A. D., aged 43, married, nulliparous, who complained of her right leg being red, "weeping," swollen, and intensely itchy. The inflammation extended from the sole (which was not affected) to the level of the tibial tuberosity, and encircled the entire limb. At times scales were seen.

Two and a half years ago the patient noticed a small red spot on the inner side of the ankle; the redness round it spread in all directions. The patient has been accustomed during the last eighteen months to putting on starch poultices to relieve the pain.

From March 12th till April 27th I treated the patient locally with zinc oxide, ammoniated mercury, bismuth, etc., and internally by arsenic, with citrate of iron and quinine. She had also lotions of lead and calamine. The redness increased and the itching continued, so that on April 24th she was compelled to remain in bed.

On April 27th, I noticed that she had a small, hard goitre on the right side of the neck, about the size of a small hen's egg. This appeared fifteen years ago, and had never left her. There was no exophthalmos. I then gave thyroid extract, 5-gr. tabloids (Burroughs and Wellcome), three daily, and dusted the limb with a simple dusting powder.

By May 5th, scales had formed over the surface of the leg. The redness was slightly diminished; the itching was nearly gone. Six thyroid tabloids were ordered daily.

By May 13th, the scales had peeled off considerably. The skin underneath looked more healthy, and "weeping" and itching had ceased.

On May 14th, the patient had to attend to her duties, and accordingly got up.

On May 30th, the redness had nearly disappeared; the skin was smooth and natural. She merely complained of a little stiffness, and a very little cedema at the ankle. Pulse and temperature were during all the time normal.

On June 10th, there were two small crusts on the inner side of the ankle, each the size of sixpence; otherwise the leg was nearly as white as the other. The patient could perform all her duties with no discomfort. The goitre had not changed during the treatment by thyroid.

The patient is still taking six tabloids daily, and she has suffered no inconvenience constitutionally excepting one day's nausea.

POISONING BY CAMPHOR: RECOVERY.

ON May 2nd, 1896, at 10 P.M., I was called to see a woman, aged 35, who had swallowed 1 oz. of camphor oil in mistake for castor oil. The camphor oil contained camphor and olive oil, in the proportion of 1 to 4, consequently she had taken about 96 grains of camphor.

On taking the drug she felt a burning pain in the throat and stomach, accompanied by great thirst. She became giddy, vision was blurred, and breathing difficult. In about ten minutes she was seized with a convulsion, which quickly passed off and left her delirious. She then retched, but was unable to vomit. I arrived at the house about half an hour after the poison had been taken. I found her in a convulsion, the back rigid, arms and legs extended, face pale, pupils dilated, and the breathing inclined to be stertorous. Twitchings then came on, beginning in the face, the eyelids moved, the arms were thrown to-and-fro, and the legs jerked about as in the clonic stage of an epileptic fit. This condition lasted about a minute. She became quiet for several minutes, and then sat up in bed in an excited, semi-conscious state, with pale face, and perspiring profusely. The pulse was full, soft, and 120.

I administered an emetic of mustard and tepid water without much difficulty, and it acted in about five minutes. She vomited half a pint of a yellowish fluid, smelling strongly of camphor, containing small pieces of food and shreds of mucus. Shortly after the emesis she had another convulsion, but milder than the last. The emetic was repeated, with a large draught of tepid water, and about half a pint of fluid, like the last, was ejected. After a short interval a third emetic was given, and this time the ejected fluid had only a slight odour of camphor. I was unable to wash out the stomach, as I had no siphon tube with me. She seemed greatly relieved by the repeated emeses, and became quiet, but complained of severe pain over the hypogastric and left hypochondriac regions. The pain disappeared on applying a poultice. Her breathing now became regular, her pupils less dilated, and she fell asleep about 11 P.M. (one hour and a half after taking the camphor). She passed a tolerably comfortable night, but had several mild convulsions. Next day she was dull, apathetic, and faint, and had no appetite; but in a few days she regained strength, and no serious effects followed the mishap.

East¹ recorded a case of a lad, aged 19, who recovered after taking 120 grains of camphor, and in his case the leading symptom, as in the above case, was a convulsion of an epileptic type. An infant is reported by Schaaf² to have died from the effects of 30 grains of camphor, but in the majority of the cases reported which have ended fatally, the exact dose taken was not ascertained.

A METHOD OF TEMPORARILY CLOSING THE OPENING AFTER GASTROTOMY.

In the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL of June 6th, Mr. Harrison Cripps describes a method of temporarily closing the opening after gastrotomy, etc., by means of a small indiarubber valve.

In 1892 I had occasion to use a somewhat similar method, which has, in my opinion, several advantages over Mr. Cripps's plan.

Messrs. Krohne and Sese-mann attached the valve for me about 3 inches from the end of a Jacques catheter. The catheter is introduced, the valve closing like an umbrella and expanding again when in the stomach. A thicker piece of indiarubber is then slipped over the catheter and rests on the skin, being fastened to the catheter by a couple of small safety pins. The end of the catheter is passed through the dressings and clamped. When feeding the patient it is only necessary to unclamp the projecting end of the catheter and inject the nourishment.

There will be no escape of stomach contents.

CEDEMA AND PROLAPSE OF CERVIX IN PREGNANCY AND LABOUR.

In the EPITOME of the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL of July 20th, 1895, there is a note on cedema and prolapse of the cervix in pregnancy and labour, in which is described a case of partial prolapse. A few years back I was called on to attend a black woman, as she was unable to give birth—we never are called in this country until labour has gone for two or three days fruitlessly. I examined her, and was rather non-plussed at being unable to find the os uteri. I found a pedunculated hour-glass shaped body occupying the vagina and protruding at the vulva. This proved to be the cervix uteri, enormously elongated, of course, so as to protrude externally, the os uteri being at the apex of the body and without the vulva. I had no difficulty in dilating the os and passing the forceps, when the child was readily extracted. The woman made a speedy and complete recovery, but has avoided the cause; hence I am unable to say if the condition recurs.

A few months back I was again called in to a case of a similar nature, in this instance of the right anterior portion of the lip of the cervix uteri, which was enlarged and protruded; the enlargement was about the size of a turkey's egg. There was no difficulty in effecting delivery with the aid of the forceps. Believing it to be a polypoid outgrowth, I directed the woman, when able, to come to the hospital for the purpose of removal. She did so a couple of months after, when I found the growth had entirely disappeared, and the only vestige of its existence was a small irregular red surface on the cervix. It may not be unnecessary to add that it had not sloughed off, but, the cause of the cedema having disappeared, it had retracted naturally.

I was unable to get any previous history of these cases, as they are not observant of these matters, and, being fatalistic, everything goes as a matter of course.

THE REMOVAL OF CARBUNCLES BY EXCISION.

(By J. O'CONOR, M.A., M.D., B.Ch. (T.C.D.), Senior Medical Officer.)

DURING the past three years it has fallen to my lot to treat twelve cases of carbuncle, six on the nape of the neck, two on the buttock, two on the back, one on the perineum, and one on the face. In each instance the treatment adopted was excision, supplemented in four cases by erosion. The operation is carried out in the following manner:

1. The patient having been placed under ether, a deep incision is made round the whole circumference of the carbuncle, at least half an inch outside the infected area. Luckily carbuncles, as a rule, do not occupy parts where there are any large blood vessels, therefore there can be no excuse for stinting the depth of this incision.

2. With the handle of a scalpel or periosteal elevator the carbuncular mass is undermined, elevated, and removed in the same manner as a tumour of the breast.

3. Sometimes it happens that the disease has extended too deep, and cannot be isolated from the surrounding structures. In such a case I always remove all I can with the knife, then a strong scissors is brought into action, and lastly the operation is finished with a sharp Volkmann's spoon. Not a trace of the disease should be left.

4. In order to contend with any microscopical particles that should have escaped this process of eradication, I swab the whole surface with a solution of zinc chloride, 40 grains to 1 ounce. Of course this is only used in cases that do not admit of clean removal.

5. A large circular wound is generally left; this is finally painted with the following solution: Carbolic acid one part, alcohol one part, methyl violet one part, water ten parts; dusted with iodoform, packed with iodoform gauze, and bandaged.

6. When the granulating wound comes level with the surrounding skin Thiersch's grafts are applied, which considerably hasten the cure.

Needless to say, this operation is not by any means a bloodless one; but with a steady assistant armed with a dozen pressure forceps there is no need of alarm; any vessels that merit it are tied; the general oozing soon ceases with pressure of a sponge soaked in hot water.

Out of the 12 cases, 8 were cleanly excised: the remaining 4 required the scissors, spoon, etc. In not a single instance did the disease recur in the wound; constitutional symptoms, in some cases severe, vanished in twenty-four hours. In fact, it is hard to realise that a patient so deeply in the throes of septicæmia can be restored to his normal state in such a short space of time. No other method that I have ever tried or heard of equals complete excision in this respect. To show this I shall mention one case:

A ship's officer, aged 35, entered the British Hospital suffering from a large carbuncle, situated below the spine of the left scapula; on the evening of admission his temperature was 104° F., tongue furred and dry, pulse 110, cold clammy sweats, anorexia, with an anxious face, flying all the signals of surgical distress. On the following morning, as his general condition was worse, notwithstanding the frequent application of warm boracic fomentations through the night, he was placed under chloroform and an incision made around the whole circumference of the carbuncle, reserved for "pestiferous" cases outside the town, and it was not till 1841 that cancerous patients were admitted to the Saint Marcoul Hospital in a special part of the building. In his Traité des Malades du Sein (2nd edition, 1858, p. 510) Velpeau says: "For my part, I have long looked upon the contagion of cancer not as proved but as possible."

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

A MEETING of Convocation was held at the University on June 23rd; Mr. E. H. Busk, M.A., LL.B., Chairman, presided.

Election to the Senate.—Scrutineers were appointed for taking the votes for the nomination of a list of three persons to be submitted to Her Majesty for the selection therefrom of a Fellow of the University, and subsequently reported that Mr. W. Rivington, M.S., M.B., B.A., had obtained 963 votes; Sir J. Lister, Bart., M.B., B.A., 846 votes; and Mr. R. M. Stephenson, LL.B., 32 votes. The names on the list will consequently be placed in the above order, and Mr. Rivington in all probability be selected to fill the present vacancy on the Senate.

Standing Orders.—The adjourned debate on the resolutions recommended by the Committee on the Standing Orders was resumed by Professor Sylvanus Thompson, who proposed:

That this House approves of the Standing Orders constituting a Standing Committee in place of an Annual Committee.

—Mr. A. Bassett Hopkins seconded the resolution.—Dr. Heber L. Hart, LL.D., objected to the members voting in faculties, and proposed as an amendment the elision of those words from the proposed Standing Order 64, which would give 9 members to each of the faculties of arts, laws, medicine, and science (including music).—Mr. W. T. Lynn, B.A., seconded.—Mr. T. S. Osler, LL.B., B.A., held that there was nothing in the proposed orders which directed faculty voting. The order simply stated that each member should have three votes, and it was mere supposition that he would give them to candidates of his own faculty. He would merge the faculties of arts and laws into one division, to be represented by 18, that is, half the members of the Standing Committee, and would leave the faculties of medicine and science each to be represented by 9 members, as proposed by the Committee and the Standing Orders.—Mr. G. Eastes, M.B., would prefer that the faculties of medicine and science should be amalgamated as in the present annual committee, and be represented by the other 18 members of the Standing Committee.—After some further discussion the amendment of Dr. H. L. Hart was defeated and the original proposals of the Committee on the Standing Orders were carried, with the modification that each member should vote for not more than three names under each of the four faculties. The proposed Standing Order raising the quorum and the proposed Standing Orders lengthening the time for the issuing of notices before the meetings of Convocation were carried. It was lastly resolved:

That Convocation at its ordinary meeting in May next, instead of electing an annual committee of 32 members, proceed to elect, for period of three years, a standing committee of 36 members, of whom 9 shall belong to the Faculty of Arts, 9 to the Faculty of Laws, 9 to the Faculty of Medicine, and 9 to the Faculty of Science including Music, each member of Convocation having at this election 9 votes.

The House then adjourned, and other resolutions were consequently not proposed.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS v. DUNDEE COLLEGE.

LORD BALFOUR OF BURLEIGH, the Secretary for Scotland, in the course of a letter addressed to the Secretary of the University Court of St. Andrews, after referring to the difficulties which had arisen in connection with the agreement of 1890, writes: "I confess to a desire to leave past controversies as far as possible behind us, and I should like to accept the proposal of the Court first made to me in your letter of April 16th, and now again repeated, that I should receive a deputation from the Court. I say this in the hope that the subjects to be discussed will have regard rather to the future than to the past, and that the Court will indicate, at any rate in outline, what course they would like to see followed. If I hear from you that this proposal commends itself to the Court, I would make a communication to the authorities of Dundee College in a similar sense, and to the Universities Commissioners, in the hope that we might be able to find a line of action which would meet with consent on the part of all, and would reconcile interests, at present conflicting, but which I firmly believe are not really antagonistic to each other."

Sir WILLOUGHBY F. WADE hereby gives notice that he will propose the repeal of By-laws 28, 29, 30, 31, and the enactment of new By-laws as follows:

1 (28). At a meeting of the Council held during the annual meeting in 1896 a Committee of eleven (11) members of the Council shall be elected, who, with the President of the Council and the Treasurer, shall constitute the Committee of Council. Three members shall form a quorum. Three of the elected members shall retire annually, and shall after 1898 be ineligible for re-election for twelve months. The retiring members shall be those who have attended the fewest meetings during the year, or in case of equality of attendances those who have been longest in office, or if necessary the retirement shall be determined by ballot.

2 (29). The Council may fill up any vacancy caused by death, retirement, or otherwise during the currency of the year. The member so elected shall be deemed to have been elected at the time at which his predecessor had been elected. The Council shall at each annual meeting elect members to fill the places of those who have been compulsorily retired.

3 (30). The Committee of Council shall meet at the office of the Association once in each month (except in August), on such day as they may fix, provided, however, that the meeting in January, April, July, and October shall be held on the day preceding the quarterly meeting of the Council. For each monthly attendance at the office of the Association each of the above-named members shall be entitled to an honorarium of three (3) guineas in addition to a first-class return railway fare.

4 (31). The Committee of Council shall examine into the general working of the office and JOURNAL, and certify the quarterly accounts, and shall also undertake such other duties as may from time to time be remitted to it by the Council, which shall also have the power to regulate its proceedings by standing orders or otherwise. The Committee of Council shall enter a report of its proceedings (including the attendance of members) in a book, which shall be read to the Council for its adoption.

LETTERS, NOTES, AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Queries, answers, and communications relating to subjects to which special departments of the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL are devoted will be found under their respective headings.

QUERIES.

A MEMBER would be pleased to know where he can send a patient suffering from hysterical anorexia.

M.D. Ed. F.R.C.S. Ed. asks for the best method to adopt to study Arabic, and whether it is a language difficult to an Englishman.

R. M. D. asks for information as to the best battery for heating cauteries. Are dry batteries satisfactory?

LONDON AND MANCHESTER ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to ask whether he would be doing right in accepting the post of medical officer to the London and Manchester Assurance Society.

. The "touting" system carried on by this Society is a very objectionable one, and has repeatedly been commented upon in these columns. Our correspondent would do well to consider very carefully whether it is wise to accept a position which is sure to put him on bad terms with many of his professional brethren in his neighbourhood.

AMBULANCE LECTURES.

ENQUIRER proposes to give ambulance classes in the village in which he resides, and asks as to books giving hints on the best way to conduct them and the limits of the information to be imparted.

. There are hosts of books, but probably First Aid to the Injured, published by St. John Ambulance Association, 8, John's Gate, Clerkenwell, would answer "Enquirer's" purpose.

BOARD SCHOOL CERTIFICATES.

OUR opinion is asked in regard to a letter received from the mistress of a Board School to the following effect: "I am in receipt of certificate kindly sent by you stating that ——— was suffering from bronchitis on Monday last. I think there must be some mistake, as the child was seen on that day both by her teacher and by the Board visitor, and, when questioned as to why she was absent from school, replied that she had to remain at home to nurse her mother who was ill."

. The reasonable way out of the difficulty seems to be that the School Boards should refer to their medical officer all obscurely-worded certificates, and also those cases of apparent discrepancy between the certificates and the reports of the visitor, who would then put himself into communication with the writer of the certificate. When a second certificate may be necessary the Board should pay a fee. In the present chaotic condition of affairs, however, we do not see how such a letter as the one forwarded to us for our opinion can be fairly considered impertinent.

HOSPITALS FOR CONSUMPTION.

DR. WILLIAM IRVINE (Liverpool) writes: The Committee of the Liverpool Hospital for Consumption contemplate building a new hospital. Preparatory to doing so they have asked me to obtain particulars as to locality and otherwise of the most recently constructed hospitals of the kind. Would you be so kind as to put me in the way of obtaining such information, and as to what authority to consult?

. The Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor, Isle of Wight, is probably the best model existing in this country. The Hospital for June 8th, 1895, contains a plan and description of the Hospital for Consumption most recently built (in Ireland). An essay, published last year by Dr. S. A. Knopf, entitled Les Sanatoria: Traitement a Prophylaxie de la Phthisie Pulmonaire (Paris: Georges Carré) may be consulted with advantage. The article on the treatment of Tuberculosis by Professor F. Penzoldt, of Erlangen, in the third volume of Penzoldt and Slintzing's Handbuch der speciellen Therapie contains a description of some of the best hospitals and sanatoria, and a discussion of the principle on which they should be constructed.

ANSWERS.

REMEDY FOR JAUNDICE.

H. C.—The analysis of this material gives no indication of containing any ingredient that would be efficacious as a remedy for jaundice. It consists of a sandy earth mixed with treacle, and is evidently a quack remedy.

SURGEON-CAPTAIN.—Dr. Codd informs us that the tabloids introduced by him to give effect to Dr. Hewlett's suggestion as to Ehrlich's diazo-reaction are made by Messrs. Burroughs, Wellcome, and Co., Snow Hill Buildings, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

H. I. M.—There is no book on elementary physiology for an adult class such as the one referred to which surpasses Huxley's (Macmillan and Co.). Stewart's Manual of Physiology contains a number of happy illustrations, and might be of considerable service to the lecturer, but is not adapted to popular use.

UNQUALIFIED PRACTICE.

A MEMBER (Leeds).—If our correspondent will communicate full particulars of the case of unqualified practice to which he has called our
