

orders; and, says Dr. Périer, "I was cited to attend, and was accused by the mayor of having spoilt his work. The Curé, however, who was well up in embryologie sacrée, stuck to his text. We had a post mortem examination; nothing was found, and the bodies reburied. Such were my tribulations relative to hysterotomy!"—M. Aran asserts, on the strength of his clinical experience, that pleurisy of the right side is, in ninety-five cases out of a hundred, of a secondary character, depending upon pulmonary tubercles; whilst, on the other hand, pleurisy of the left side is generally primitive, follows a regular course, and gets well spontaneously.—The green, red, yellow, and white colouring matters of children's toys are frequently formed as follows: the green of Scheele's green; the red of minium; the white of lime and carbonate of lead; and the yellow of chromate of lead.—M. Grave tells us that he has discovered a new virtue in chloroform—viz., a power of modifying the flavour of various articles. He finds, for example, that chloroform, when mixed in certain proportions with tincture of aloes or of gentian, and with sulphate of quinine in water, completely takes away their bitter taste.—M. Piorry, famed for plessimetry and nomenclature, has during the past year made use of the following terms to express the following compound ideas, plessimetrical, of sound and sensation: Sclerotic, of hardness; malassic, of softness; hydric, of fluidity; aeric, of the gaseous; hydreric, of the gaseous and the fluid; pallic, of the vibratile; elastic, of elasticity. The degree of these sounds he represents by hyper- and hypo-; the combination of them is represented by their union; etc.—The following are the names of the authors whose works have been adopted by the French Minister of War as best suited to the purposes of the military surgeon: MM. Sappey, Anatomy; Béclard, Physiology; Malagutti, Chemistry; Garnot, Physics; Moquin-Tandon, Medical Botany and Zoology; Morel and Willemin, Histology; Nélaton, Surgery; Grisolle, Medicine; Chomel, General Pathology; Sédillot, Operative Surgery; Cazeaux, Midwifery; Bouchardat, Materia Medica; Michel Lévy, Hygiene; Briand, Medical Jurisprudence.—Calculus affections are very common in Persia. Dr. Pollak ascribes the fact to the general use of milk, and particularly of sour milk, of acid fruits, and wine. Dr. Pollak, in the course of eight years, has operated 158 times in Persia. His operations were always performed in the open air, and under chloroform. His cures were 144, and deaths 7.—M. Felix Hatin, the author of a memoir on the Cæsarean operation which lately provoked a very warm discussion in the French Academy, died a short time ago.—The Italian journals lament the death of M. Alessandrini, Professor of Comparative Anatomy in the University of Bologna, where he had formed a superb museum. His loss is deplored as a citizen as well as a savant.

IMAGINARY SPERMATORRHOEA.

[The following letter has been sent to us at this time in consequence of the publication, last week, in the Lancet, of a Clinical lecture by Dr. Chambers on "Imaginary Spermatorrhœa," in which are related the details of a fatal case that had been in the hands of a Mr. Dawson, of Finsbury Circus. In the following instance the patient has received a thorough medical education, and is therefore well qualified to give his opinion as to his freedom from disease of the urinary organs before the treatment was commenced. At his request we withhold, for the present, his name, and a few additional circumstances mentioned in the letter, but he is quite prepared to justify his statements, which scarce require a comment.]

SIR,—.....I take the liberty of sending you a few particulars of my own experience of Dawson.

I was so unfortunate as to fall into his hands in October 1851. For a considerable time before that date, I had suffered from phimosis. A great quantity of filth had been allowed to accumulate under the foreskin, causing great irritation. Emissions occurred at long intervals. Up to the date mentioned, I had not commenced the study of medicine. In October 1851 I was in London, about to commence my medical studies, and having stumbled upon his book, I went to consult him. He made scarcely any inquiries, but got a bit of glass, pretended to squeeze something upon it out of the urethra, put it under a large microscope, and immediately pronounced that I was "suffering a good deal from spermatorrhœa." I told him I was going to Edinburgh shortly for purposes of study. He said he could do nothing unless I stayed in London three weeks or a month, and that it would be time enough to go then. He also stipulated that a guinea was to be paid every time he passed an instrument. During that month of October an instrument was passed (as I find from memoranda of fees paid) twelve times. Ointment, composed principally, as Dawson said, of chloride of zinc, was applied to the urethral surface by means of this instrument, and I believe some of it was squirted into the bladder. These applications produced pain and bloody urine. In November I left for Edinburgh. I allowed him to practise this treatment upon me at various times afterwards, up to June 1855. Not to be tedious, suffice it to say, that the instrument, with the ointment, was applied, first and last, twenty-eight times. On two of these occasions nitrate of silver was substituted for the ointment. Up to the very last, Dawson always took fees from me, although he knew perfectly well that I was a medical student.

Soon after the last application (in 1855), I had a severe attack of swelled testicle. The sexual organs are smaller since this affair of the swelled testicle, and I have suffered in various ways ever since. My life has been frequently rendered miserable for months at a time by very severe neuralgia affecting the whole of the right side, the loin, groin, hip, thigh, popliteal space, the leg, and even extending into the foot. I am obliged yet to wear a well fitted suspensory bandage; and I believe I shall wear it all my life. I am liable, after the slightest extra walking, to violent attacks of urethritis. On these occasions the urethra pours out pus in extraordinary quantity. From the dropping, there is, no doubt, some stricture; but I am shy about exploring the passage. I am certain that when I first went to Dawson there was nothing the matter, but what cleanliness, an astringent lotion to the surface of the glands, and a few days, would have set right. I never practised masturbation; I never had any venereal disease; nor did anything, except the above-mentioned treatment, ever happen to me calculated to injure my sexual system. I have always lived temperately, and have originally had a good constitution.....

Withholding my name from actual publication for the present, you are at liberty to make any use you please of this letter.

I am, etc.,

M.D. UNIV. EDIN., M.R.C.S., L.S.A.

THE COMING ELECTION AT THE COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.

SIR,—An attempt will, it appears, be made at the ensuing election of members of Council of the College of Surgeons to break through the custom which has hitherto prevailed, of re-electing the members going out by rotation. Three gentlemen are proposed, in addition to the three whose turn of office is about to expire, and who desire to have it renewed. The three new names are those of Mr. John Adams, Surgeon to the London Hospital; Mr. Paget, of Leicester; and Mr. Fergusson, of King's College. Now, sir, if a precedent is to be set aside, it is desirable that the Fellows of the College should fairly understand what they are doing. The first-named two gentlemen are next in rotation of seniority as members of the College; and their names would, under the usage which has been heretofore pursued, stand next in order as candidates for the Council when vacancies occurred.* They are unimpeachable names. It may be a question whether Mr. Paget can attend properly to the duties of the College while he is still practising at Leicester?

In the case of the nomination of Mr. Fergusson, however, there is a still further departure from precedent. Mr. Fergusson is a junior member of the College as compared with many who are eligible for the Council. Is there any strong reason why he should be put forward? Are there any reasons why the Fellows should not confer an unusual distinction on him? There has been a great deal of oblique hinting at some person—a surgeon, eminent in the profession—who has been giving direct and indirect support to homœopathy. In a letter in the JOURNAL of this day, it is hinted that such an one is a candidate for a seat in the Council of the College of Surgeons. Many years ago this gentleman's conduct, in going down to the country to consult with a homœopath, was strongly reprobated; and at the present moment it is a matter of frequent comment amongst London practitioners that he continues openly and constantly to do so. If these things are so, for the sake of all that is honest, let them be spoken out; and let the Fellows deal with them with their eyes open. If they are not, let them be denied; that we may be relieved from the stigma which attaches to the belief, that one in the largest practice, and who has by his manual skill placed himself forward in the estimation of the public, is daily compromising the dignity of the profession by the support of quackery. Then the question would remain, On what grounds should Mr. Fergusson be elected before many men who are quite as fit as himself to * Our correspondent makes a slight mistake on this point. Mr. Adams is next in rotation, his membership dating 1823; but Mr. Paget's membership dates 1818. EDITOR.

MR. PAGET A CANDIDATE FOR THE COUNCIL OF THE COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.

LETTER FROM EDWIN MORRIS, M.D.

SIR,—I am exceedingly gratified to find that Mr. Paget of Leicester has been nominated for a seat in the Council of the College of Surgeons. He is one of the ablest and most talented associates we have; and I do hope that every member of the Association, being a fellow of the College, will be present at the election on the 4th of July, to support the first provincial candidate. It has long been a matter of surprise and regret to me that advantage has not been taken before of availing ourselves of the privilege the charter of 1843 gave us. The meaningless routine of re-electing the retiring members of the Council cannot be otherwise than most detrimental to the interest of the College. The great body of the fellows consist of provincial men, and we require a provincial man to represent us. The nominators of Mr. Paget have been most fortunate in their selection. His long standing in the profession; his well-known advocacy of the rights, dignity, and interests of the medical profession; his power of debate, together with high classical attainments,—point him out as a most desirable candidate, and one that will do honour to the country fellows, in being their first representative at the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons.

Of Mr. Fergusson's claims as a candidate I shall forbear to speak. His election I look upon as certain, and it will be a well-merited compliment to that gentleman. I do consider that the London fellows ought not to have it all their own way, and that we should have one country fellow with a seat in the Council; and I shall be very much mistaken and exceedingly sorry if, on the 4th of July, Mr. Paget is not by a large majority placed in that honourable position. I am, etc.,

EDWIN MORRIS, M.D.,

And Fellow (by Exam.) of the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

Spalding, June 1861.

MR. PAGET AND THE COLLEGE FELLOWSHIP.

SIR,—I have just received the printed form respecting the election of three Councillors for the College of Surgeons; and Mr. Paget of Leicester is eligible, and is proposed. As he is one of our old and most distinguished associates, would it not be suitable to urge upon our members the importance of electing him? We of the provinces are entirely unrepresented in the College, and no one stands higher than Mr. Paget does. I write this in the hope that you will support Mr. Paget's cause by an article on the subject of our unrepresented state.

I have not the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with Mr. Paget. I am, etc., F.R.C.S.

INTESTINAL OBSTRUCTION.

LETTER FROM JOHN GAY, ESQ.

SIR,—I am unwilling to trespass further upon the pages of your valuable JOURNAL than to say, in reply to Mr. Hinton's last letter, that whilst I do not presume to believe that I shall ever be able to throw any great amount of light on the subject of internal obstruction, I feel assured that by accumulating fresh and precise information on that important subject, and submitting it to keen analysis, others, more able, will arrive at more satisfactory generalisations than any that have hitherto been reached.

I feel that Mr. Hinton is animated with the same desire as myself; and that, if he continue in the path of observation and induction upon which he entered long before I did, he must succeed in discovering gradually more and more subtle grounds of distinction between the various forms of that Protean malady, and thus enable the surgeon to enter upon the exploration of the abdominal cavity in cases of severe obstruction with more assurance and greater chance of success than he is at present able to command. I am, etc.,

JOHN GAY.

TURNER. On June 10th, Anna Mary, wife of *Thomas Turner, Esq., Surgeon, Manchester.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON. At a special session of the council, held on Saturday last, the Atkinson Morley Surgical scholarship, £45 per annum, tenable for three years, was awarded to Mr. Henry Charlton Bastian, of Falmouth.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS. On Saturday last, the London College of Physicians gave a very successful dinner at the college. Amongst the numerous guests were the Archbishop of York, Bishop of Bath and Wells, Lord Stanley, Sir Cornwell Lewis, the Attorney General, and numerous other illustrations of the Bar, the Pulpit, and the Legislature.

THE BRUNEL AND STEPHENSON STATUES. At a meeting of the committee, on Friday, it was determined that the statues to the memory of these eminent engineers shall be placed in propinquity to the statue of Pitt in the gardens of St. Margaret's, Westminster, facing the House of Commons, in Old Palace Yard. They are to be executed in bronze by Baron Marochetti.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE. The portions of the classical authors selected by the Board of Medical Studies for examination in the ensuing Academic year are:—Hippocrates.—The 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th sections of the Aphorisms. Aretæus.—"On the Causes and Symptoms of Acute Diseases." The 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th chapters of the second Book. Celsus.—The 3rd and 4th Books.

ACCIDENTAL POISONING. On Sunday last, between 9 and 10 o'clock, the wife of the Dean of Worcester, who has been for some time an invalid, took by mistake a copious dose of laudanum in place of some other medicine, which she supposed a bottle standing in her sick room to contain. The unfortunate lady has since remained in a state of syncope, with a few partially rallying moments.

UNLUCKY ROMAN DOCTORS. In pursuance of a police search into the private affairs of the professors and pupils of the Hospital of Santo Spirito, the following things have been brought to light, viz.:—A percussion pistol (used for experiments), several score letters (chiefly invitations to dinner), a portrait of Victor Emmanuel (very indifferent), and two gold shirt buttons with the effigy of the same sovereign. In consequence of these discoveries the Doctors Sforza, Crescini, Trace, Marchetti, and Mancini have been exiled.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE BISHOP, F.R.S. This zealous devotee of astronomical science expired on June 14th, at his residence, South Villa, Regent's-park, having nearly completed his 77th year. Mr. Bishop successfully filled the offices of Secretary and Treasurer of the Royal Astronomical Society, and was elected President of that body in 1857. His observatory, which he maintained in activity for nearly a quarter of a century, has contributed, in addition to incidental work, an extensive catalogue of double stars, eleven new planets, two comets, and upwards of twenty-five variable stars to our list, besides a remarkable star which suddenly became visible in 1848, the only one of its nature which has been seen since the year 1670.

NEW FRENCH AMBULANCE. This ambulance is an omnibus-shaped vehicle, to be drawn by two or more horses; weighing some twelve hundred pounds, but constructed in such a manner that it may be easily detached, separated in several pieces in the interior, the most important portion easily carried by several men. The interior is, when fully standing, a row of beds, carrying six or eight men with great ease, but when crowded, may be forced to transport three times that number. Each bed is a "field-stretcher," or portable cot, which takes the wounded man from the field, and without any fatiguing change, places him in this portable hospital. An india-rubber bath is also attached.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR CHARLES HASTINGS.

On Saturday week last an influential meeting was held at Worcester to promote subscriptions for a testimonial to Sir Charles Hastings, on the occasion of his resigning the appointment of physician to the Worcester Infirmary, and in consideration of the services he has for many years rendered to the county, not only with reference to the above institution, but also to many other works of public utility. The meeting was attended by both the city members, O. Ricardo and R. Padmore, Esqrs.; Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart.; and numerous other gentlemen of the town and county.

The following resolutions, with others which appear in our advertising columns, were carried:—

"That, in the opinion of this meeting, the retirement of Sir Charles Hastings from the office of honorary physician to the Worcester Infirmary, with which institution he has been connected for a period of nearly fifty years, presents a suitable opportunity of evincing in an adequate manner the high estimation which the public entertain, not only for his indefatigable and successful exertions to promote the interests of that charity, but also to disseminate throughout this city and county a taste for science and knowledge, and to elevate the character of the profession of which he is himself a distinguished member."

"That the eminent services of Sir Charles Hastings throughout his long career merit a public recognition beyond the boundary of his immediate locality, from all who appreciate the practical advantage resulting from the successful application of medical science and the beneficial influence of philanthropic example."

The speakers all spoke in the highest terms of the good deeds of Sir Charles Hastings.

The Rev. J. PEARSON said he had heard a great many persons express their regret at Sir Charles Hastings' retirement from the situation which he had held so long, and with such very great ability. At the same time, he had heard but one expression of entire concurrence so far as related to the great prudence and judgment shown by Sir Charles Hastings in retiring from the situation while his mental faculties and bodily powers were altogether unimpaired. As was well known, many persons continued in situations long after they were adequate to discharge the duties; but Sir Charles Hastings might have hoped for a number of years to be quite capable of performing adequately and ably the duties of the situation he had now vacated. He thought, and, indeed, it was the general opinion, that Sir Charles Hastings had resigned his situation from most worthy motives, and in a most worthy manner, and he had shown great discretion in giving way to younger men. He had now retired after a period of nearly fifty years connection with the institution. Having referred in complimentary terms to the measures taken by Sir Charles Hastings to establish the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, and his continued endeavours to support the medical profession, Mr. Pearson said that whether they looked upon Sir Charles as having been connected with the infirmary nearly fifty years, and having worked his utmost to promote its success, whether they regarded him as the founder of the Natural History Society and its museum, and as the promoter of natural science generally in that district, or whether they looked upon him with reference to his social character and virtues, in either way he was very greatly to be admired. Sir Charles Hastings was a man of the most undeviating perseverance and of the greatest possible energy, true and faithful to his friends and to his party, even when, perhaps, sometimes they were in error, which was often considered a great virtue. Whether considered socially, intellectually, or professionally, he was worthy of their most sincere and high regard; and he (Mr. Pearson) was, therefore, certain the meeting would wish to do him all honour.

MR. CARDEN said it was a great pleasure to him to see so many working medical men present, because he believed, however much the general public were indebted to Sir Charles Hastings, still it was the estimation in which a man was held by those working in the same profession that was, perhaps, after all, the true criterion of his absolute merit. Sir Charles Hastings first entered the infirmary as house-surgeon forty-nine years ago; he was then quite a young man, he (Mr. Carden) believed only about eighteen years of age, and was only just out of his time to those with whom he had served his apprenticeship. After discharging his duty in the infirmary, Sir Charles left it to graduate, and in 1819 he was appointed physician. He first entered the infirmary in 1812 as house-surgeon; it was in 1819 that he was appointed physician. The first trace they had of Sir Charles Hastings in the infirmary was his asking the governors to do something in the way of building; and in 1823 the new north-west portion of the infirmary was erected. The next addition to the building was in 1826, when they turned their attic wards into more convenient wards, and so the infirmary had gone on improving from time to time ever since; and by Sir Charles Hastings's patient efforts and perseverance a better classification of the patients had been obtained. Sir Charles Hastings had persevered in the most unrebukeable manner. In nothing that he took in his head could he be stopped; where he believed the thing to be right, he ceased not his efforts, till it was accomplished. That had led very frequently to considerable discussion, and now and then even to very warm discussion. Sir Charles Hastings had, he believed, been blamed for driving the coach too fast; but to what an extent that coach had been enlarged and improved. He (Mr. Carden) must say that Sir Charles Hastings had pushed the governors rather hard on many occasions, and the effect was now evident both in the north wing, of which he had spoken, and the west wing, which, in 1845, was added, in consequence of a memorial headed by Sir Charles, besides a great number of other very essential improvements that had taken place in consequence of Sir Charles's great energy and perseverance. Another thing, also very pleasing in connection with those improvements, was that the funds of the institution had not fallen off. When the infirmary was first opened, the capital amounted only to £4000 or £5000, but now the funded property amounted to £35,000; and, in proportion as the wants of the institution were felt by the county, money was never found wanting, and he believed never would be. Sir Charles had not been long physician to the infirmary, when he saw that the great want among the provincial medical men was that of union, of entire communication, and of a press through which they might put before the public the result of their very extended experience. In 1828, Sir Charles, and one or two gentlemen who took the same view with him, published the Midland Medical and Surgical Reporter. For four years that journal continued, and excited considerable attention; but in 1832, the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association was founded, and on July 10th, 1832, about twenty-nine years ago, the first meeting was held in the Board-room of the Worcester Infirmary. On that occasion Sir C. Hastings addressed a meeting of about fifty members of the profession under the presidency of Dr. Edward Johnstone, brother to Dr. James Johnstone, formerly one of the physicians to the infirmary. He (Mr. Carden) read the opening sentences of Sir Charles Hastings's address on that occasion, as they appeared so characteristic of the man, and somewhat prophetic of the state of the medical profession. Certainly, the prophecy, the aspirations of Sir Charles Hastings and those who met him on that occasion, had been fully verified. Instead of there being disunion amongst members of the profession—instead of medical men in their separate walks of life being the centre of small circles, they were now able, not only to reap the advantage of each other's experience, but to meet each other personally, and enjoy a mutual friendship. They had been listened to throughout the whole length and breadth of the land, and that which was but a meeting of fifty men, representing some one hundred and fifty others of the profession, had expanded, until the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association had become the British Medical Association, with its seventeen local branches, and 2000 members. They had made their voices heard throughout the length and breadth of the land, in a way that they deserved, and all that had been accomplished through the untiring efforts of Sir Charles Hastings. It was to him who had denied himself rest when he required it, who had been at all times unmindful of his ease and comfort in order to raise the medical men, to unite them, and to make them what they were always intended, and were calculated to be, a credit to their profession, and a credit to their country—it was to Sir Charles Hastings that all honour and esteem for so doing was to be given. He (Mr. Carden) would not detain them longer than to say that the cause of that meeting had been to them—he spoke now of the members of the medical profession—a source of the deepest possible regret. It was quite impossible to look upon the departure of Sir Charles Hastings from his most active field of labour without the deepest feelings of regret, which he (Mr. Carden) confessed he felt as much, perhaps more, than any one present. But he thought Sir Charles Hastings was actuated in that, as in every action of his life, by the best possible motives, and a desire to do the best he could for the institution, whose welfare he had so long had at heart.

EAST INDIA ARMY MEDICAL BRANCH. In the House of Commons, on June 13, Mr. Blake asked the Secretary of State for India if he had any objection to state what arrangements had been made with regard to the position of the medical officers of the late East India Company's army on its amalgamation with the Queen's forces; whether it was intended that medical officers who received an increase of rank by the warrant of January, 1860, similar to that granted to officers of the Queen's army by the warrant of October, 1858, should also receive the same increase of pay in proportion as was then granted to medical officers in the Royal army; and were the senior medical officers of her Majesty's Indian service to be promoted to the rank of principal inspector general, inspector general of hospitals, and deputy inspectors general of hospitals, as heretofore, when vacancies occurred; or were those appointments in future to be filled by the medical officers of her Majesty's Royal army.—Sir C. Wood said that the whole question of the army medical staff was under the consideration of the government, and he could not answer the question of the hon. gentleman until some decision should have been come to upon that subject.
