A case of pneumothorax complicating bronchopneumonia in a boy, aged 2 years, was described by Dr. Alice Sanderson in 1911.⁶ She refers to twelve published cases of pneumothorax in children under 16 years, but none of these seemed to be due to pneumonia or bronchopneumonia. O. Meyer, in 1916,⁷ reported two cases (one of them fatal) of pneumothorax in children resulting from influenzal lung affections. Sidney Matthews⁸ (1918) reports the case of a girl, aged 7 years, who recovered from pneumothorax of the left side following an attack of bronchopneumonia after whooping-cough and measles.

SURGICAL EMPHYSEMA IN A FATAL CASE OF INFLUENZA.

DR. GARRETT'S case in the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL of December 21st, 1918, p. 686, suggests the publication of these notes.

A strong, healthy girl aged 19, who in August last was able to swim two miles in the sea, was taken ill with influenza on November 19th. Two of her sisters were taken ill at the same time and developed pneumonia.

On November 21st the patient had well marked bronchitis and bronchial asthma, and on November 22nd pneumonia. During the night of November 23rd she suddenly became very collapsed, and from this time until she died it was scarcely ever possible to count her pulse. Cyanosis and pallor were very marked.

There was very great dyspnoea, aggravated by the slightest exertion, so that it was not possible to turn her over to examine the back.

On November 25th surgical emphysema of the face, neck, and upper part of the chest was discovered, and there was resonance over the mediastinum. The emphysema gradually diminished. She was kept alive by brandy, oxygen, and injections of pituitrin and digitalin until December 2nd, when she died. There was no post-mortem examination.

The surgical emphysema appears to have been due to a leakage of air from the lower part of the trachea or a main bronchus in the mediastinum. I think it occurred on the night of November 23rd, and caused the sudden collapse which then took place.

A CASE OF INVERSION OF THE UTERUS.

I RECENTLY received an urgent notification from a midwife to visit a case. The midwife informed me that the labour had been slow but otherwise normal until, less than five minutes before my arrival, there was a severe pain followed by rapid delivery of placenta and collapse of the patient. The midwife having received the placenta and uterus in a flamed container, maintained her position, and ordered a relative to get stimulants, to apply hot bottles, and to raise a minimum of dust.

Shock was profound; the radial pulse was not palpable, respiration was shallow and apparent in epigastrium only, the conjunctival reflex was absent. A diagnosis was made by inspection alone. Provided with india-rubber gloves but no means of rapidly sterilizing them, a three-second scrub up in lysol solution was substituted. The placenta was completely separated, the membranes covering the everted surface of the uterus non-adherent, and there was no bleeding. Reduction proved easy, and was followed by a strikingly rapid recovery from the shock.

According to Atthill (Tweedy and Wrench), "In order for inversion of uterus to occur, it must be in a partially atonic condition and the placenta situated on the fundus." In this case the woman was 19 years of age, of poor physique, and had given birth to her elder child in her sixteenth year. I feel justified in assuming that a partially atonic condition did occur in this case. The placental site was at the fundus and somewhat anterior.

The midwife protests that she felt the fundus immediately after delivery, then turned her attention to the child, and did not again interfere with the mother until, warned by the sudden severe pain, she seized her flamed container, and was just in time to place it in position to receive the placenta, etc. This statement may be taken to exclude any possibility of pulling on cord or pressure on fundus.

The salient features in treatment to be learnt from this case were (1) immediate reduction of uterus; (2) the masterly inactivity of the nurse, which minimized the risk of sepsis; (3) the necessity of a general practitioner providing himself with some "always ready" sterilized package to contain gauze and gloves. The woman did not become septic, and made an uninterrupted recovery.

WAR SURGERY OF THE LUNG.

At a meeting of the Section of Surgery of the Royal Academy of Medicine in Ireland, with Sir JOHN W. MOORE in the chair, Colonel WILLIAM TAYLOR briefly reviewed the surgery of the lung as carried out at the front. He showed that the change was simply that of harmonizing or adapting the principles of surgery, as they are now applied to other wounds, to those of the lung or chest. It was estimated that the mortality due to chest wounds at the regimental aid posts varied from 25 to 30 per cent.; at the casualty clearing stations it averaged about 18 to 20 per cent., while at the base hospitals it was about 10 to 12 per cent. The average general mortality of chest wounds was about 18 to 20 per cent. This high mortality was due to the fact that shell wounds preponderated over bullet wounds to the extent of 3 to 1. The mortality of shell wounds as compared with bullet wounds was as 14 to 1; it was the risk of sepsis in connexion with shell wounds that rendered them so dangerous. The mortality was highest during the first forty-eight hours. Open wounds of the chest were grave as compared with closed wounds; they were at least twice as dangerous. Lung wounds, like other wounds, were contaminated by the mere entrance of the foreign body, whether retained or not. Like any other wound, there was an area of necrotic tissue which formed a culture medium for the growth of organisms. Twenty-five per cent. of wounds of the lung proved fatal from haemorrhage and asphyxia. Surgeons now endeavoured to arrest the bleeding by direct surgical intervention at many casualty clearing stations. It had been shown that the operation of thoracotomy has little or no effect upon external blood pressure. Operations could be performed successfully upon the chest and lung in patients with a blood pressure as low as 50 mm. Hg—a point of great practical importance. The gravity of the prognosis of lung wounds was much increased by the frequency with which pleuro-pulmonary lesions of the opposite side occurred. Infection of the haemothorax in bullet wounds was exceptional. With an opening in the thoracic wall an aerobic infection from without was added to the anaerobic infection arising from the pleuro-pulmonary wound; it was partly on this account that open wounds of the thorax were so dangerous. The gravity of chest wounds from the fifth day onwards was due to pleural suppuration much more than to infection of the lung itself. The treatment of punctured wounds of the lung depended upon whether the wound was superficial, whether the foreign body was retained, or whether the case was one of the through-and-through type. The foreign body was removed when possible together with fragments of bone and pieces of clothing. The track was cleansed and the opening into the lung carefully closed. Primary extraction of all foreign bodies from the lung must be considered the rational treatment for preventing infection. Access could be gained to the lung most satisfactorily by an incision from the mid-axillary line to the parasternal region over the fifth rib. Several inches of the rib were excised, and the ribs above and below widely retracted. Openings in the diaphragm must be closed. The entire pleural surfaces should be wiped clean and the

Dr. Christopher Addison, who was lecturer in anatomy in the medical school of St. Bartholomew's Hospital when he entered Parliament for the Hoxton Division of Shoreditch in 1910, became Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Education in August, 1914. When the Ministry of Munitions was established in the following year he became its Parliamentary Secretary, and succeeded Mr. Lloyd George as Minister at the end of 1916. In 1917 he became Minister of Reconstruction, and in that capacity introduced the Ministries of Health Bill at the end of last session.

Major A. C. Farquharson graduated M.B., C.M.Glasg. in 1889, and M.D. in 1891; he has held various public medical appointments in the Auckland district of co. Durham. He is also a barrister-at-law. He is a member of the Council of the British Medical Association. At the outbreak of war he was a captain in the R.A.M.C. Territorial Force, and one of the medical officers to the 6th Battalion Durham Light Infantry. In 1915 he was appointed to the head quarter staff of the 63rd Division, and a year later became deputy assistant director of medical services on the staff of the D.D.M.S., Northern Command.

Sir Auckland Geddes, one of the many distinguished anatomists the Edinburgh school has given to other universities, is professor of anatomy, McGill University, Montreal. He had served in the South African war as a lieutenant in the 3rd Highland Light Infantry, and at the outbreak of war came to this country to serve again. He was Director of Recruiting at the War Office from 1916 to 1917, when he became Minister of National Service. He is now President of the Local Government Board.

Dr. Bouverie F. P. McDonald graduated M.B., C.M.Edin. in 1884, and M.D. in 1886. He is in practice in New Brighton on the Mersey, and is a county councillor and J.P. for Cheshire. He has taken a very active part in local war work in Wirral, and served on the recruiting committee of Wallasey, the constituency for which he now sits.

Major J. E. Molson graduated M.B., B.C.Camb. in 1891 and M.D. in 1905. He holds a commission as Major in the R.A.M.C. Territorial Force. He had retired from practice before the war.

Lieut.-Colonel Nathan Raw, C.M.G., graduated M.B., B.S. Durh. in 1888, and M.D. in 1891. He has been physician to the Mill Road Infirmary, Liverpool, since 1897, and is a member of the International Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. He has been O.C. of No. 6 British Red Cross (Liverpool Merchants) Hospital in France.

Captain Walter E. Elliot graduated M.B., Ch.B.Glas. in 1913. He held a commission in the R.A.M.C. Special Reserve and was attached to the Scots Greys. He was wounded in France and was awarded the Military Cross as well as a French decoration.

The constituency of the Western Isles, which Dr. Donald Murray has been elected to represent, includes the Lews, Harris, and North and South Uist. He was born in Stornoway, where he now resides, and graduated M.B., C.M.Glas. in 1890. He is M.O.H. for Lewis and Stornoway, and medical inspector of school children for Lewis and the western portion of Ross-shire.

Dr. John Crowley is medical officer of the Ballycastle Dispensary District, co. Mayo.

Dr. B. A. Cusack, medical officer of the Turloughmore Dispensary District, co. Galway, is, we are informed, at present interned in Birmingham. He is a brother of Dr. P. J. Cusack, the defeated Irish parliamentary candidate for North Meath.

Dr. Richard Hayes was Poor Law medical officer of the Lusk Dispensary District, co. Dublin. For his part in the rebellion he was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude. He is at present, we are informed, interned in England.

Dr. P. McCartan was Poor Law medical officer in the county Tyrone, and is, we are informed, at present in America.

Dr. James Ryan only recently qualified, and is engaged in private practice in the town of Wexford.

NEW YEAR HONOURS.

CERTAIN New Year honours were announced on New Year's day in the London Gazette, but further lists will appear later, including what is commonly called the Prime Minister's list. The lists so far issued refer to services rendered in the Royal Navy, in the army in France and Flanders and in India. Certain civil honours are also announced. Medico-Legal.

AN UNREGISTERED PRACTITIONER.

At the Bromley police court, on December 19th and 23rd, 1918, James Allan pleaded guilty to a charge of practising as a medical man without being registered. A second charge of unlawfully signing a death certificate was not proceeded with in view of the plea of guilty to the first charge. Sir Archibald Bodkin, who appeared for the Director of Public Prosecutions, said that there was a James Allan, who in 1892 obtained the M.B. and C.M. degrees at Edinburgh University. He died in 1898 and his name was erased from the Medical Register, and that name with those degrees never again appeared therein. In the unofficial publication called the Medical Directory, however, there appeared from 1901 onwards the name of James Allan, M.B., C.M.Ed. The form sent out by the publishers of the directory for the 1919 edition was returned with the addition after the defendant's name of the letters O.B.E. This distinction, which had been conferred on James Allan, appeared in the newspapers, and was seen by the acting registrar of the General Medical Council, who looked at the official publication, and found that no such practitioner was registered therein. Accordingly he communicated with the Scottish branch registrar, and communications were addressed to James Allan. In consequence of the replies the registrar in London communicated with the solicitor to the Council, and the matter came before the Director of Public Prosecutions. As the result of inquiries by the police it was found that the defendant was the son of an Irish farmer, who went to Glasgow at the age of 18, and, after being a shop assistant for a time, studied medicine; afterwards he went as assistant to doctors and then practised at Chislehurst as a medical man. Owing to his energy in connexion with local Red Cross hospitals he received the distinction of O.B.E. Lord Chilton, Director of the Kent V.A.D., in giving evidence as to the defendant's character, praised his work at the Chislehurst Red Cross Hospital; and the Rector of Chislehurst said that Allan attended his household for sixteen years with skill and success. Mr. Tree, who appeared for the defendant, pleaded that he had been guilty of a technical offence, but had done nothing to the danger of the public; owing to a stupid blunder twenty years ago as a young man he had not qualified. The Bench imposed the maximum penalty of £20, with ten guineas cost.

The Services.

RELEASE OF TERRITORIAL OFFICERS.

THE Army Council has issued an Army Order applying provisions, similar to those already made for the release from the colours of men of the Territorial Force, to officers of the same force; and providing for the gradual disembodiment of such Territorial officers as the exigencies of the service permit. Officers so disembodied will be liable, at any time before the general demobilization of the Territorial Force, to be re-embodied, either individually or collectively, in case of urgent military necessity. As this power will not be exercised except in the event of military emergency it will not interfere with the resettlement of officers in civilian life, nor is it intended to interfere with their emigration or repatriation overseas. Officers disembodied in accordance with this Army Order must notify permanent changes of address to the Military Secretary, War Office. The order does not make specific reference to Territorial medical officers.

Medical News.

DR. H. E. BOWER, of Stretton, near Warrington, has been appointed a commissioner of the peace for the county of Chester.

AT the meeting of the Röntgen Society on Tuesday next at 8.15 p.m., at the Royal Society of Arts, Dr. H. S. Allen will read a paper on electrical changes produced by light.

A COURSE in hospital administration for the diploma in public health will be given at the Western Hospital, Fulham, by the medical superintendent, Dr. R. M. Bruce, beginning on January 7th. Further particulars can be obtained from the clerk to the Metropolitan Asylums Board.

THE next meeting of the Research Committee of the American Red Cross in France will be held in Paris on January 10th and 11th. There will be a conference on surgery at the base on January 10th, and on the following day discussions on administrative work at the base and medical problems of entrainment and embarkation.

COLONEL J. G. ADAMI, M.D., F.R.S., A.D.M.S., Canadian Army Medical Corps, will open a discussion on the prevention and arrest of venereal disease in the army at a meeting of the Royal Institute of Public Health (37, Russell Square) on Wednesday next, at 4 p.m. Lord Sydenham will be in the chair, and among those who will take part in the discussion are Dr. Mary Scharlieb, several medical officers of the United States Army, and Lieut.-Colonel L. W. Harrison, D.S.O., R.A.M.C.

SIR ROBERT ARMSTRONG-JONES will give his next course of Gresham Lectures on Physic at Gresham College, Basinghall Street, E.C., on January 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th at 6 p.m. on each day. The first lecture will deal with heredity, the second with alcohol, the third with venereal diseases, and the fourth with the recent epidemic of influenza and measures taken to combat its spread.

BURBERRY'S (Haymarket, London, S.W.1) are holding a sale during January and February of weatherproof topcoats, suits, and gowns, which will be sold at specially low prices, comparable to those before the war. They also intend to sell a number of service weatherproofs and other articles of naval and military equipment.

THE Medical Officers of Schools Association, being desirous of compiling a register of medical men and women whose professional services are in any way employed in connexion with the hygienic care of schools or colleges, asks such members of the profession to send particulars to Dr. G. Chaikin, honorary secretary, 11, Chandos Street, W.1.

THE Abdulla Cigarette Company (173, New Bond Street, London) has again prepared a wall almanac and has offered 20,000 for sale for the benefit of the British Red Cross Society at the price of 1s. 4d. a copy, out of which 1s. will be paid to the fund of the society. The almanac is again well illustrated by pictures, some in black and white and others in colours, for every month in the year, and has a frontispiece in colours by Mr. Charles E. Brock, R.I.

A SOCIETY of orthopaedic surgery has recently been formed in France. M. Kirmisson, professor of clinical surgery and diseases of children in the University of Paris, is the president, and MM. Auguste Broca, professor of operative surgery in the Paris faculty, and Dénucé, associate professor in the University of Bordeaux, are vice-presidents. The secretary-general is M. Nové-Jusserand, associate professor in the Lyons faculty. The first annual meeting will be held in Paris in October, 1919, at the same time as the French Congress of Surgery. The subjects proposed for discussion are amputations in relation to subsequent prostheses, spondylitis in the war, and the treatment of false joints.

ACUTE poliomyelitis was made notifiable in 1912, and polio-encephalitis was included in the county of London. The Local Government Board has now made an order making not only polio-encephalitis everywhere notifiable, but also acute lethargic encephalitis, the obscure disease which occurred on a small scale in epidemic form in the spring of 1918. The illness, it is noted, presented the characters of an acute general disease associated with progressive languor, apathy, and drowsiness passing into lethargy, muscular weakness passing into complete disablement, and various paralyses of muscles chiefly of the eyes and face.
