

Rayne Institute, King's College Hospital Medical School

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, as chancellor of London University, is to open the Rayne Institute at King's College Hospital Medical School on 30 May. This provides nearly 2800 m<sup>2</sup> (30 000 ft<sup>2</sup>) for research laboratories for both medical school and hospital staff. The subjects at present being investigated include prostaglandins in cancer; natural "killer" cells that appear to deal with cancer cells and viruses without any previous "priming"; testing and screening new drugs for skin cancer; prenatal diagnosis of haemophilia and thalassaemia; a possible viral cause of some congenital abnormalities; drug treatment of epilepsy; and monitoring lead in children. This is the third institute to be financed by the Rayne Foundation, the first two also being in London, at St Thomas's Hospital and University College Hospital; another, devoted to immunology, is to open at the Institut Pasteur in Paris next year.
