

great esteem by his fellow Scots. The death of a man of his calibre is a loss not only to his immediate family—he leaves a widow, three daughters, and one son—and friends but to the community as a whole, particularly to his patients, to whom he was truly "the beloved physician." As an epitaph one might well say: He was a good man and a wise doctor.—E. P. J.

Mr. M. D. THAKORE writes: Dr. W. W. McGRATH, whose obituary was printed in the Journal of August 21 (p. 475), came to Doncaster Royal Infirmary as house-surgeon to the eye and ear departments early in 1939. After serving his term he went to Gloucester before joining the Forces. In the course of over twenty years as honorary ophthalmic surgeon to the Doncaster Royal Infirmary I have come across many residents appointed to the department. I have no hesitation in recording the fact that Dr. McGrath was among the most efficient, conscientious, and courteous. While in the Forces, and later when in general practice, he kept in touch with me until the end of 1953. While working as an eye specialist in the R.A.F. he told me that his work and experience at Doncaster had helped him considerably in the discharge of his duties, and later he informed me that it was his intention to undertake part-time ophthalmological work when he returned to civilian life. We continued to exchange Christmas greetings up to last year. Hence I read with great sorrow of the passing of such a pleasant colleague in the prime of life. May I convey my sincere sympathy to his family through your esteemed columns?
