LONDON HOSPITAL MEDICAL SOCIETY'S SOIRÉE.—The microscopical soirée of the London Hospital Medical Society was held on Friday, the 10th inst., in the Medical College. By the kind permission of the Council, the greater part of the ground floor was in use. The anatomical, pathological, and materia medica museums, which were used as a general promenade, had numerous curiosities and objects of interests displayed in them. The reading-room was devoted to microscopes, stereoscopes, and photographic views. In the anatomical theatre, a good collection of glees and solos were admirably performed, and some recitations given with great success. A number of lime-light views were shown in the chemical theatre, thanks to the kindness of Dr. Tidy, who placed his instruments unreservedly at the disposal of the Committee. Refreshments were provided in the lecturer's room, and done due justice to. The rooms were crowded; many strangers and neighbouring medical men being present, together with a large number of the members of the Society, and all seemed much pleased and interested by the entertainment, which lasted from seven to half-past ten; the only cloud upon which was the serious indisposition and consequent absence of the President, Mr. Mercier.

COMMUNICATIONS respecting editorial matters, should be addressed to the Editor: those concerning business matters, non-delivery of the JOURNAL, etc., should be addressed to the General Manager, at the Office, 36, Great Queen Street, W.C.

ERRATUM.—In the notice of Crieff, p. 741, BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL, read, at end of paragraph, "the parishes of Crieff, Comrie, Monzievaird, and Muthill".

MIDWIFERY ENGAGEMENTS.

SIR,—The practice of which H. complains is not uncommon. Although I have attended a large amount of cheap midwifery, I rarely get cheated. I advise H. when a woman engages him, to tell her it is a contract, and that he shall expect his fee, whether called in or not, and to ask her if she wish to engage him on those terms. If she consent, and do not send for him, he is at liberty to sue her husband for his fee, and I believe would recover. With a little tact and firmness, I think he would soon get over his difficulty. He would find a good deal of worry in going to law—more than it is worth.—I am, etc.,

December 1875.

AN OLD PRACTITIONER.

ARE YEW-LEAVES POISONOUS TO PHEASANTS?

MR. M. A. KENNY (Holme-on-Spalding Moor) asks whether the leaves of the yew-tree are poisonous to pheasants, and, if so, in what way do they act? He has lately examined a pheasant, and found yew-leaves in the gullet and a few in the stomach. There were no signs of irritation. He tested for metallic poisoning, but found no trace.

ERRATA.—In Mr. Christopher Heath's clinical lecture in last week's JOURNAL, p. 725, first column, last line but one, for "continued", read "confirmed"; p. 726, first col., line 20, for "was", "were"; line 19 from bottom, for "vertical", read "vertebral"; line 3 from bottom, insert "of" between line and force; 11 lines from end of lecture, for "no", read "a".

CORRESPONDENTS are particularly requested by the Editor to observe that communications relating to Advertisements, changes of address, and other business matters, should be addressed to Mr Francis Fowke, General Secretary and Manager, at the Journal Office, 36, Great Queen Street, W.C., and not to the Editor.

MISPLACED ANNOUNCEMENT.

SIR.—In the last issue of your JOURNAL, under the heading "Misplaced Announcement", a correspondent has furnished you with a notice that appeared in one of our local papers, in which my name appears in a most erroneous light. That paragraph, I need not say, appeared without my knowledge or sanction. A member of the Hospital Committee, in his zeal for the interests of the institution, had it inserted. I refrained, on the advice of several of my professional brethren, from noticing it in the paper, inasmuch as we considered it would be only giving the matter undue publicity, and would not be understood by the reading public. I brought the matter before the next meeting of the Ulster Medical Society, as I felt it was due to the members and myself to explain the facts of the case.

I am happy to state that no member of the profession to whom I am known would for a moment attribute any connection on my part with so unworthy and unprofessional a proceeding; and I am sorry to find your JOURNAL made the medium of placing members of our profession in a false light before their brethren. I would respectfully suggest your observing greater caution for the future before inserting, without inquiry, communications from your Belfast correspondent, who, if he belong to our profession, must have been actuated by other than honourable motives.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN FAGAN, F.R.C.S.I.

* * The paragraph was transferred to our columns without any comment except the obviously just one implied in the head. Mr. Fagan's highly satisfactory explanation would have been better without the tag. In noticing such "misplaced announcement", the JOURNAL fulfils an important function. Not every such announcement—and there are only too many of them—can be as satisfactorily explained and as promptly disavowed.

L. M. D.—Mr. Pillischer, New Bond Street, London.

THE HOSPITAL SATURDAY FUND.

SIR.—I am requested by the members of the Hospital Saturday Board, who met last evening, to beg you to state, in contradiction to an announcement which, we are informed, appeared in your columns, that there is no intention whatever to transfer the functions of the Hospital Saturday Fund to the Sunday Fund; on the contrary, every arrangement calculated to ensure a successful collection for next year is in active preparation. It being the intention of those earnest members of the industrial classes who have devoted their energies to the good work to still persevere, it will be satisfactory to the public to know this, and that the distribution of the amount (£4,000) available of this year's collection has been completed, the principal hospitals participating being King's College (£158 1s. 9½d.), London (£426 8s. 3d.), Metropolitan Convalescent (£228 12s. 3½d.), Middlesex (£206 17s. 8d.), Seamen's (£148 17s. 6½d.), and University College (£159 16s. 3½d.).—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

CHAS. MERCIER, Chairman.

28, Leicester Square, W.C., December 9th, 1875.

DR. ROGERS.—We will draw attention to the subject next week.

WHOOPING-COUGH.

In the course of a case lately tried before the Vice-Chancellor's Court, "The Attorney-General v. the Hyde Chemical Company", an affidavit was put in deposing that the medical men in the neighbourhood of Hyde, a town in Cheshire, had within the last month sent about forty children suffering from whooping-cough to the manufactory to inhale the fumes of pitch.

MESSRS. WEISS and Co. forward us a letter from Mr. Barr of Northampton, stating that more than a year ago they made for him a spring hypodermic syringe similar in principle to that of Leiter's of Vienna, but, in his opinion, superior in construction. Leiter's syringe is, however, by no means of recent invention, and was described by us chiefly because we have found it useful.

SO-CALLED INQUESTS.

WE have before us, cut from the Ecceles Advertiser of November 13th, 1875, the following report of what appears on the face of it to have been a monstrous farce, though called an inquest.

"Inquest on the Body of a Child found in the Irwell.—Inspector John Henderson deposed that on Sunday, the 7th November, about twelve o'clock at noon, he was in a field near the boat-house, at Irlam, when his attention was drawn to an object on the opposite side of the river. The object was about fifty yards past the boat-house on the Flixton side of the river, floating in the stream, but entangled in some willows. He got a man to take a boat and fetch it across for him, and he did not lose sight of it while the man was fetching it across. When he got possession of the object, he washed it: found it to be the body of a full grown male child. It had apparently been in the water some weeks. The skull was open in the middle, and there were no brains in it. The navel-string appeared to have been rudely broken asunder without being tied. No medical man had seen it: he thought it would be difficult for a medical man to say whether it had been born alive or not. There was a wrapping round its loins—a coarse old apron. The water was half way up the towing-path, and had been five feet higher than it then was during the night. No information had been obtained respecting the mother of the child. A verdict was returned to the effect that the child was "Found dead, and that there was no evidence to show that the child was born alive."

Thus one of the most important and nicest questions in jurisprudence is described as having been settled on the off-hand dictum of a police-inspector, that he thought it would be difficult for a medical man to decide it. We need not point out the crass ignorance involved, or the certainty that such a mode of proceeding must, in the end, facilitate crime, and defeat the ends of justice. It is desirable at this time to collect such flowers of justice from the inquiries of legal cornerers, and we shall be obliged if those of our readers under whose notice they may come in the columns of local papers will have the goodness to mark them and forward the papers to us.

ERRATUM.—In the list of candidates who passed their examination on November 16th (JOURNAL, November 20th, page 660), the name "Whitley, E. E.," should be "Whitby, E. V."

NOTICES of Births, Deaths, Marriages, and Appointments, intended for insertion in the BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL, should arrive at the Office not later than 10 A.M. on Thursday.

MEDICAL EDUCATION.

SIR,—I own the letter of your correspondent K. N. M. on the subject of medical education generally, and the course of education in Edinburgh specially, has occasioned me much surprise. To make a few remarks on his letter is perhaps allowable to an old graduate who has been unable, from many years' absence in the East, and pressing engagements since his return, to revisit, for more than twenty years, the scene where some of the pleasantest, and he would hope, the most profitable, years of his life were passed. His only regret then was, and still is, that he could not, after graduation, spend another session there to allow more perfect assimilation of the "food" he had received.

First, it may be well to say but a few words as to some of the teachers who then filled the professorial chairs. Their names together are surely sufficient to refute K. N. M.'s idea, that "the success of Edinburgh as a seat of learning is to be as much attributed to political considerations as to the wisdom and greatness of its professors"—Goodison, Alison, Syme, Miller, Simpson, Christison, Bennett, Balfour, and Jamieson. Is there one of these names that is not well known over Europe or America? The writer went to modern Athens when over twenty-one years of age, and knowing nothing whatever of medicine or medical practice, and so his impressions may be taken as illustrating the effect of the system. The only prior assistance he had was, that for some years he had studied chemistry under an old pupil of Liebig.

Naturally, the study of the bones, as the framework of anatomy, was the first. Does not the study of the bones at first suggest the parallel of the generals of medical subjects being studied before the particulars? My course of study was entirely that recommended, except that I attended Syme's clinical surgery from my first session, and nearly every session afterwards. Yet I differ from K. N. M., as I can now recall many of Alison's remarks, and turn up my note-books for confirmation. Syme's lectures I can scarcely imagine any one forgetting; his remarks were so terse, frequently so scathing in verbiage, and yet so filled with instruction. Some of Christison's clinical lectures are now vividly present to my mind, and many of Simpson's and Bennett's. Yet why should I go on with such reminiscences, when I wish to defend the system in vogue, which I believe is right, and more likely to produce a class of medical men with a breadth of view, as contradistinguished from the routine practice likely to be engendered by such a process of educational cramming, combined with two hours' practical instruction, as is recommended by K. N. M.? What more likely to induce a true practical knowledge of the body than lectures giving a general knowledge of anatomy, combined with practice at dissection, followed by the institutes of medicine, showing the intimate structure and function of each part, and then their diseased conditions? then medicine proper giving a general view, clinical medicine a particular, and general pathology and practical pathology completing (as far as we can) our natural history of the body in health and disease? Side by side with these we naturally have chemistry, botany, natural history, and materia medica; and, except of the last, no very deep knowledge is required at examinations. Hospital practice is combined, and illustrates what the student has heard in lectures, and what he must supplement by reading, as various classes of disease come before him. Medical education is only the framework of knowledge; on practice and thought of one's own labours, and comparing these with the works of others, must hang the wisdom of the experienced physician.

Many medical students fail from not devoting a certain portion of time day by day to completing the work of the day. Lectures are attended but not listened to, not being considered to have a distinct place in the medical curriculum. The subject is not read after lecture, and so it goes on till the crammer has in a few weeks to try to get his pupil to remember what requires months and years to master and digest, and even then imperfectly.

That lectures are most useful is, to my mind, abundantly proved by the lectures in the extra-academic school in Edinburgh, which are numerous, and much resorted to; and the lecturers themselves act as no mean stimuli to exertion in their academic brethren.

There was one most important matter which distinguished, or did in my day distinguish, the Edinburgh Infirmary medical officers, which was the daily visit, and its absolute punctuality. The arrival of Syme, Miller, Spence, Alison, Christison, and Bennett, was absolutely to the time, and it was only the most pressing emergency which prevented the daily round from being made. When in Paris, I found the same punctuality; and it is a most important matter to teach the student, that the medical men in charge of important cases should see them daily.

I have not specially alluded to surgery and midwifery: the lectures on both had a high degree of interest as well as instruction.

So much for the University and its malignant lectures. Then, what pleasant evenings were Fridays at the Royal Medical Society, venerable in a green old age, dating from 1737; proving, by the roll of attendance, that the students were not so overburdened with academic work but that they could devote some of their spare time to write each in his turn a paper on some medical or scientific subject, to be circulated in duplicate for a fortnight, and then discussed. Surely, earnestness in work may be claimed for such a society, and the work was all that of volunteers. Meeting in their own hall, the Society had in my day a library of 14,000 volumes; and, if I remember rightly, about £2,000 of accumulated funds. The story of that Society has, I think, much to do with the eminence of the University, and shows that the University teaching of medicine bore such fruit in generations long gone by as could be shown by no other British school of medicine.

I have most pleasant memories of the years I passed and the agreeable society I enjoyed, procured by a few letters of introduction. It is, I think, no mean item in the advantages to a student that he should have good society occasionally.

As a place for study, I need scarce say aught of the physical features or the surroundings of Edinburgh; but as to the basis and plan of medical education pursued, I would say with the old Roman, "Hanc retinete quæso, Quirites, quam vobis tanquam hereditatem majores vestri reliquerunt."—Your obedient servant,
November 8th, 1875. M.D. EDIN.

MR. MALCOLM.—The following are the correct lines.

"How 'D.D.' swaggers, 'M.D.' rolls;

I dubb them both a brace of noddies;

Old 'D.D.' takes the cure of souls,

And 'M.D.' takes the cure of bodies.

Between them both, what treatment rare

Our souls and bodies must endure;

One takes the cure without the care,

T'other the care without the cure."

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.—The half-yearly examination of candidates for the diploma of Fellowship of the College was brought to a close on Saturday, November 27th.

THE EXAMINATION OF M.R.C.P.L.

SIR,—Can any one who has recently passed the final examination for the M.R.C.P. kindly give me some information as regards the best works in which to study the prescribed subjects? These are: Medical Anatomy, Principles of Medicine, Practice of Medicine, Principles of Public Health, and Psychological Medicine. Moreover, one has previously to translate a passage from a Latin author, and have the opportunity of showing a knowledge of Greek, or of one or more of the European languages (Rule 15). This looks very simple; but I should like the opinion of a recent candidate as to the security or otherwise of the examination. In the bustle of general practice, it is not many who keep up their classical studies; and what might have been easy fifteen years ago, may perhaps be formidable now. Any information will be very acceptable to yours, etc.,

December 1875.

IGNORAMUS.

ONLY A DOCTOR.—As showing how members of our profession were appreciated by the upper classes a few years ago, Mr. Greville, in his Memoirs of George and William IV. states that on dining one evening at Lord Holand's, he found himself between Sir George Robinson and a common looking man in black; and, as "he did not open his lips, except to eat, I settled that he was some obscure man of letters, or of medicine—perhaps a cholera doctor". To his great astonishment, he found him able to carry on a conversation on every subject started; and it was not until Lord Auckland respectfully addressed the supposed "cholera-doctor" as "Mr. Macaulay", that he became aware of the genius seated by his side, when he snobbishly observes, "I thought I should have dropped off my chair; the perspiration burst from every pore of my face".

We would suggest to Mr. T. P. Lucas to submit his "doubts" direct to Dr. T. L. Brunton.
