Cigarette Advertisements and Tar Yields

The Department of Health has announced that, as a result of a voluntary agreement between it and the tobacco industry, tar groups are to be shown on cigarette brand advertisements in the future. The grouping will be based on a table published on 10 September by the D.H.S.S. showing tar and nicotine yields of the main brands of cigarettes sold in Britain.

The table, which is the third of its kind to be produced (see B.M.J., 21 April 1973, p. 134 and 20 October 1973, p. 181), is divided into five groups according to the tar yield, as follows: low tar (0-10 mg/cigarette); low to middle 11-16 mg; middle tar 17-22 mg; middle to high 23-28 mg; and high tar 29 mg and over.

Within the next few weeks manufacturers have undertaken to show in all advertisements the tar group in which their brands fall. The tar and nicotine yield figures are rounded averages of the samples tested, and the brands are tabulated in the order of tar yield; those with the lowest tar yield at the top of the list. Where more than one brand has the same figure for tar yield the brands are in alphabetical order.

Copies of the new table of cigarettes are to be made widely available, and will be sent to health authorities for distribution. Leaflets will also be available from the Health Education Council, 78 New Oxford Street, London W.C.1.
