SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

It has not unfrequently happened that spontaneous combustion has given rise to unfounded suspicion of homicide. The following is an instance in point:—

On the 6th of January the corpse of a man was found burning on his bed, by an attendant who entered his room in the morning. A thick smoke filled the chamber, and a small white flame was seen to play about the body. The bed-clothes were almost destroyed, and the bedstead had become charred. It was ascertained that the deceased had carried lucifer matches in his pocket, and had as was his custom placed a hot brick, wrapped in flannel, to his feet. He retired to bed obout 7 o'clock in the evening and at 9 o'clock, his daughter, who passed by the door, perceived nothing unusual. The man, who was 71 years of age, was neither fat nor intemperate.

The son and daughter were suspected of having destroyed their parent, and of attempting to burn the corpse in order to conceal their crime. A physician was summoned to the inquest, and the corpse which had been buried was exhumed. The body was enveloped in a white shroud, and was moist in certain spots. Around the neck was a cravat which was much injured by fire, as was also a piece of his shirt. The hands were completely burned, with the exception of a few remains of the tendons. The thighs were also completely separated from the body. It was determined that these results could not have been produced by the, application of fire, but were due to spontaneous combustion.—Gazette Médicale.

BURNS.

From what I have seen in the practice of others, and from my own experience of many years, I do not hesitate to say that frequent dressings are decidedly mischevious, and that bandaging which approaches only to moderate firmness is hurtful. I consider it bad practice hastily to repress the growth of luxuriant granulations, and I know that neither seams, cicatrices, nor contractions, are bettered by the one or the other. Moreover, I verily believe, that debility, leanness, and death, are often the consequences of too frequent and of course unnecessary interference.
