

To avoid the appearance of plagiarism, I think it well, before seeing the publication of Mr. Brittan's observations, to state that, in the clammy sweat accompanying the last stage of collapse in cholera, we have observed minute organized bodies closely resembling other bodies admitted by naturalists and microscopists to have a Protophytic organization.

I should not have published this immature account of our incomplete investigation, but with the two-fold object of corroborating (it may be) Mr. Brittan's statements, and of vindicating myself from the possible imputation of piracy in anything I may hereafter publish on the subject.

I am, Mr. Editor, yours very obediently,

CHARLES COWDELL,

Physician to the Dorset County Hospital,
Dorchester, September 22, 1849.

LIME WATER IN CHOLERA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PROVINCIAL MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL.

SIR,—Of all the remedies which I have heard of, or seen tried, in cholera, I think none are so likely to be generally useful as lime-water, either with, or without, calomel, administered in small doses—such as one grain of calomel and half an ounce of lime-water every quarter of an hour, or less frequently according to the urgency of the symptoms.

By immediately publishing the above, you will oblige
Your obedient servant,

ISAAC WATMOUGH, M.D.

P.S.—Dry cupping over the stomach and sinapisms to the abdomen, should also be employed.—I. W.
