

PUBLIC BATHS. The multiplication of these invaluable institutions must be regarded as one of the cheering signs of the times; inasmuch as cleanliness is eminently conducive to good morals and sound physical health. We learn that Sir Charles Hastings, the founder of the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, has just laid the foundation stone of public baths at Worcester. The architect is Mr. F. T. Barbe.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CRYSTALS IN PUTREFYING BLOOD.

In the September number of this Journal, there is a short account of some crystals observed by Dr. Parkes in putrefying blood, which, there can be no doubt from the description, were those of hæmatine. According to my observation, these do not most frequently form in blood that is putrid or far advanced to this state, but in recent blood that has been extravasated a short time in the body. I recently procured some very fine ones, which I exhibited at Dr. Acland's conversazione at Oxford to the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, by simply adding water to blood which had been effused on the surface of the brain of a cat, in consequence of a wound.

Very lately, I have observed the formation of octohedral crystals in human blood, drawn from a man attacked with hemiplegia. The blood was left several weeks, and decomposed into a kind of sanious gore, which consisted of an abundantly diffused grayish granulous stuff, mingled with numerous particles of dark yellow matter. No blood-globules could be discerned in it, nor any kind of corpuscle, but there were numerous fine octohedral crystals, which resembled precisely those of oxalate of lime seen in the urine, and dissolved away on the addition of a little muriatic acid.

Perhaps this observation may give some increased probability to the opinion entertained by some physicians, that oxalic acid may be one of the intermediate products occasionally formed in the system during the oxidation of sugar into carbonic acid. At least, it shows the possibility of oxalic acid being produced in the blood.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS.

At the earnest request of some of the leading members of the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, the Proprietors of the LONDON JOURNAL OF MEDICINE have consented to withdraw their periodical in favour of the New Series of the Journal of the Association. This course has appeared to be both necessary and proper, as a very large majority of our contributors, members of the Association, are now desirous to support their own Journal.

An address issued by the Journal Committee of the Association, and DR. COWAN's letter to the members, will fully explain the coming changes. In our preface to the volume for 1852 (issued with this number), will be found some additional remarks, to which we beg to call attention.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE PROVINCIAL MEDICAL AND SURGICAL ASSOCIATION.

GENTLEMEN,—It gives me very great satisfaction to be at length in a position to direct your attention to the following outline of publication which has been adopted by the Journal Committee; but I need scarcely remind you that, however abstractedly good it may appear, it can only be accomplished by extensive combination, and the exertion of your individual interests and energies in its behalf.

The most immediate and effective assistance in your power to render, is the obtaining fresh members and forwarding their names to our colleague and editor, Dr. Cormack. Be encouraged by the reflection that all delicacy and difficulty in canvassing are now over, as you can appeal with confidence to the self-interest of every man, having more than a compensation to offer for the sacrifice you wish him to make.

Circulars will be forwarded to those gentlemen who will kindly undertake their distribution; and since heavy responsibility has been encountered, and no small labour expended by the Committee in the execution of the trust you have confided to them, you will, I doubt not, all feel honourably bound to adopt their cause as your own, and to do your utmost to raise our publication to that degree of usefulness, popularity, and influence, to which, if heartily and honestly supported, it cannot fail to attain.

The combining tendency and convenience of a cheap and really good and independent journal, the property of the profession, cannot be over estimated; and its becoming, as we trust and believe it will become, the chosen vehicle of expression to a very large proportion of British practitioners, attaches to it a prospective interest and importance which, at first sight, it might not seem to deserve. It may with perfect truth be asserted, that on the success of our Journal depends the retrogression, the stagnancy, or the prosperity of our Association; and if we are ever permitted, in any adequate extent, to carry out those high and noble purposes which heralded our Institution, and still animate our founders, a consummation so desirable can only be efficiently realised by the instrumentality of a vigorously conducted periodical press.

The opportunity for successfully establishing such an agency is now before you, and with yourselves, and not with the Committee, rests the responsibility of failure.

I remain, Gentlemen, yours very faithfully,

CHARLES COWAN.

Reading, 20th September, 1852.

ADDRESS OF THE JOURNAL COMMITTEE.

The Committee appointed at the Anniversary of the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association, held at Oxford, July 21st, 1852, with full powers to make the necessary arrangements for editing and publishing the JOURNAL in London, avail themselves of the earliest opportunity of submitting to the members the following scheme of publication, and of earnestly requesting their active co-operation and support.

Of the great superiority of such a periodical, both as regards economy and independence, over every similar undertaking of a merely commercial character, there cannot be any reasonable doubt; and the opportunity now presented to the profession of raising the standard and improving the tone of our medical periodical literature, is one we should eagerly embrace.

The Committee are glad to be able to state that the new series will have the support of a greatly augmented staff of London and Provincial contributors, the proprietors of the LONDON JOURNAL OF MEDICINE having consented to withdraw their periodical and to transfer their influence to the JOURNAL OF THE ASSOCIATION; while in DR. CORMACK they have found an editor whose long experience, acknowledged talents, and high literary qualifications, eminently fit him for the post.

It is intended that the new Journal, while it retains its original character as the organ of the Association, should secure, at the lowest possible expense, all those advantages which a weekly periodical is capable of affording; and that it should, by presenting a faithful digest of medical literature and science, as well as an attractive summary of professional news, render the purchase of any other periodical a matter of choice rather than of necessity.

THE CONTENTS of each number will be usually classed under the following principal divisions:—

- I. LEADING ARTICLES.
- II. ORIGINAL COMMUNICATIONS.
- III. BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES. [All new books to be noticed.]
- IV. PERISCOPIC REVIEW. [Careful retrospects and summaries, embracing everything that is new and important in all the British and Foreign Journals of Medicine.]
- V. REPORTS OF SOCIETIES. [Faithful, succinct, and early.]
- VI. ASSOCIATION NEWS.
- VII. TOPICS OF THE DAY.
- VIII. OBITUARY.
- IX. APPOINTMENTS.
- X. THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.
- XI. ADVERTISEMENTS.

The annual subscription to the Association is One Guinea; which, in addition to the supply of the Journal, postage free, includes the other privileges of membership. All legally qualified members of the medical profession (being regular practitioners) are eligible.

The necessary information may be obtained by applying to the General Secretary, JAMES P. SHEPPARD, Esq., Worcester; to any of the Local Honorary Secretaries; or to DR. CORMACK. The JOURNAL will be published at ITS OWN OFFICE, 37, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, to which address, it is requested that all communications to DR. CORMACK on the editorial business of the JOURNAL may be sent.

In conclusion, the Committee would simply observe, that if the profession prove true to its best interests, the scheme which they have now the honour of proposing must result in effects of great and lasting importance.

CHARLES COWAN, M.D., Chairman.
