

ASSOCIATION MEDICAL JOURNAL.

EDITED BY JOHN ROSE CORMACK, M.D.

No. XLII.

LONDON: FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 21, 1853.

NEW SERIES.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

THE ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION to the PROVINCIAL MEDICAL AND SURGICAL ASSOCIATION is £1:1:0. Legally qualified members of the profession are eligible as members. Irregular practitioners are not admitted; and improper members have from time to time been expelled. Gentlemen wishing to join the Association can obtain full information from the General Secretary (J. P. Sheppard, Esq., Worcester), from any of the local Secretaries, or from the Editor of the Journal. Every member is entitled to receive weekly, post free, the ASSOCIATION MEDICAL JOURNAL, which is the organ of the body.

ADVERTISEMENTS for the ASSOCIATION JOURNAL ought to be addressed to Mr. Honeyman, the Publisher, and not to the Editor. They are received at the office, 37, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

LETTERS from numerous correspondents have been received regarding the injustice and defects of the Vaccination Act, and on various points in relation to it. We shall insert as many of these communications as possible, endeavouring to represent by our selection all opinions. We are, from the large amount of space occupied by the list of members, obliged to defer letters on Chloroform in Parturition, on Medical Ethics, and a variety of other subjects. For the same reason some important articles in the PERISCOPIC REVIEW are also postponed.

THE NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE ASSOCIATION.

WE have great pleasure in publishing this day a complete List of the Members of the PROVINCIAL MEDICAL AND SURGICAL ASSOCIATION for the present year.

THE PREVALENT TREATMENT OF DISEASE.

It must have been obvious to the most superficial observer of the course of diseases in this country, that in the case of many of them, either their type or their treatment have undergone so great modifications, as entirely to change their aspect, their progress, and their termination. Without being enunciated in learned tomes, gradually impressing itself on the professional mind, the axiom has attained universal credence, and has been most generally acted upon, that acute inflammatory attacks of disease are becoming more and more rare; that in place of acute peritonitis, we have neuralgia and spasmodic abdominal affections; while congestive and subacute chest affections have almost entirely superseded acute pneumonia and pleuritis. The lancet has been replaced by ammonia, and leeches by agents tending rather to derive blood from internal organs, and direct the circulation to the external portions of the body, than to abstract it from the general system.

To our mind, it speaks well for the professional intellect of this country, that while few great and learned authorities have laid down general laws subversive of ancient faith on these points in medical practice, still everywhere we find a just appreciation of their bearing and import; and, instead of the disease, we find the patient to be the chief object of the medical attendant's care and solicitude. We have with the greatest pleasure noticed abroad in the medical world, a desire to form just conclusions, not so much from the experience and writings of our forefathers in physic, as from the living daily knowledge acquired by each practitioner of the healing art at the bedside of his patient. Bleeding, leeching, and blistering, are not adopted because it is so written in our worthy "Thomas's Practice of Physic"; but arguing logically on the facts within his knowledge, the practitioner draws just conclusions from the state of increased action, of depression, or of congestive action, and directs his remedies accordingly. Holding these views ourselves, we cannot but hail with pleasure the appearance of any work,*—however little it may add to our previous knowledge, and however much it may be but a record of already well recognised facts—which develops these changes in the character of disease, and lays down laws for treatment in accordance with the varieties of etiology and semeiotics everywhere observable.

It is only matter of regret to us that leading professors should be so ignorant of the state of medical practice in the provinces, as to write as if the times still continue when in surgeries twenty persons were collected for
