WHAT CIGARS ARE MADE OF. A cigar manufacturer, prosecuted for the unlawful fabrication of cheap "Havannahs," on which no duty was paid, escaped the penalty on proving that he never used any tobacco-leaf at all. In addition to the cabbage and the lettuce, rhubarb, dock, burdock, endive, colt's-foot, beech, plantain, oak, and elm leaves, peat earth, sawdust, malt comings, lime, alum, lamp black, sugar, meal of wheat, barley, oats, beans, and peas, chicory leaves steeped in tar oil, potato starch, saltpetre, fullers' earth, salt, gum, treacle, chromate of lead, red dye and black dye composed of vegetable red, iron, and liquorice, have been found in the tobacco of the shops.
