DILAUDID
KNOLL BRAND
dihydromorphinone

"Dilaudid" (Knoll) brand dihydromorphinone is an improved morphine preparation with an analgesic action five times as great as morphine, but with a considerably weaker hypnotic effect. The euphoric element is largely subdued and the risk of addiction correspondingly lowered. Tolerance is greatly improved, an increase of dosage rarely necessary. The effect on peristalsis is only slight and much less persistent than in the case of morphine.

DICODID
dihydrocodeinone

"Dicodid" (Knoll) brand dihydrocodeinone exerts a specific and selective action on the cough centre; in these respects it occupies a place midway between that of morphine and codeine. Better tolerated than morphine, it also interferes very much less with expectoration, the absence of any notable constipating effect is responsible for the use of "Dicodid" as a post-operative analgesic.

Rutin in Capillary fragility

Rutin is a crystalline glycoside obtained from the leaves and flowers of buckwheat. Recent reports attribute to Rutin the property of reducing capillary fragility when this is abnormally raised.

In our research laboratories a limited quantity has been isolated from buckwheat grown in this country and is available in the form of tablets.

Rutin A & H is suggested for administration in haemorrhagic conditions due to increased capillary fragility or permeability, especially when this condition is associated with hypertension, nutritional deficiency or toxic effects of drugs.

the most positive treatment for the most common deficiency

Anaemia caused by lack of iron is seen in day to day practice more often than any other condition due to nutritional defect. Iron in the most effective form—ferrous iron—provides the rational, straightforward treatment. Fersolate, the tablet preparation of ferrous sulphate with traces of copper and manganese, is widely used for combating the iron deficiency anaemias. Haemoglobin regeneration occurs at the rate of one to two per cent daily—usually from a dose of three Fersolate Tablets per day—and the patient's well-being is rapidly restored.

The Central Nervous

Stimulant of Choice

In depressive conditions 'Dexedrine' may be relied on to increase the patient's accessibility to treatment, to effect a remarkable improvement in mood and outlook, and to aid him in regaining a normal grip on life and living. The striking preponderance of its central nervous effect over its weak peripheral activity makes 'Dexedrine' virtually a single-action drug. Patients are ordinarily spared the disturbing consciousness of 'drug stimulation,' and thus 'Dexedrine' is especially suitable for the highly-strung, the emotionally unstable, convalescents, men and women undergoing the climacteric, and the aged.

Available for prescription in packs of 24 tablets in three 'Sealtite' units of eight.

Ribena therapy in infant welfare

The administration of vitamin C to infants has become a routine feature in child welfare. During the war, scarcity of orange juice was counter-balanced with excellent results by the use of other sources of the vitamin natural to Britain, notably blackcurrant juice, which the Ministry of Food approved as a particularly satisfactory alternative.

It is noteworthy that Ribena can be employed with advantage as a means of supplying natural vitamin C to infants from as early as the fourth week onwards; being quite free from cellular material, it cannot upset the most delicate digestion.

During the growing period generally, the vitamin C requirement is known to be much higher comparatively than during adult life, so that an accessory supply, as provided by 'Ribena,' is obviously of great benefit to children.

Ribena is standardised at not less than 20 mg. ascorbic acid per fl. oz.

Strap is fixed to Pad at A. Therefore greater pressure is exerted at B, when the strap is pulled tightly.

Where treatment of Hernia by surgical methods is undesirable for any reasons, the HECSON super elastic truss can be confidently recommended. The Special Feature of the HECSON Truss is that the perineal or under strap is attached to the top of the pad instead of the lower margin as in the ordinary elastic or old spring truss. Thus it becomes part of the leverage mechanism for increasing the pressure of the pad at its base.

Johnson's BABY LOTION

used after nappie changes
Johnson's Baby Lotion
spreads a discontinuous film that allows the skin to "breathe"
naturally

One of the chief causes of chafing and infant skin irritations is perspiration that cannot escape freely. Johnson's pure white antiseptic Baby Lotion leaves a soothing, discontinuous film on the skin that protects it against surface bacteria and at the same time allows it to "breathe" easily, because the oil-in-water emulsion is homogenized under pressure to provide extreme dispersion of the oil in micron-size globules. Thus perspiration can readily escape and the chances of heat rash and irritations are reduced. Laboratory and clinical tests show that, used after nappie changes, Johnson's Baby Lotion is the perfect product for baby skin care—and a very important step forward.

*"Remarkable paternal

Mr. Collins was a very high-class grocer, he had billheads to prove it: "High Class Grocer and Victualler, Families Waited on Daily." And madam was a very modern young woman in spite of the fact that she wore 400 coupons worth of clothes at a time. She was feeding young Percival on M.O.F., the latest idea in infant nutrition. Mr. Collins supplied it.

M.O.F. made its first appearance in Scotland in 1887: George Bernard Shaw was a promising young man of 31 and Wilbur Wright had not yet bothered to invent the aeroplane.

In 1941 M.O.F., now modernised in line with the latest ideas on infant nutrition, came to England. This fortified infant cereal found an immediate welcome. Soon pediatricians, Infant Welfare Clinics and Health Visitors were recommending it. Mothers found it economical and easy to prepare. Infants liked it.

And little Percival? He grew up to be a very dutiful son and married a girl from Fulham.

PRE-NATAL DIET and the course of PREGNANCY

The normal functioning of the reproductive organs during pregnancy depends, among other things, upon the plentiful intake of vitamins and minerals.

Medical opinion is gaining ground that there is an increased need for Vitamin B in late pregnancy and the early puerperium. Its administration during the period before childbirth has resulted in less vomiting and nausea and in marked improvement in the nutritional value of the breast milk. In order to assure the building of the foetal bones in utero and afterwards during breast-feeding, the importance of Vitamin D and of calcium and phosphorus is also established.

In Supavite Capsules the practitioner has at hand a combination of these and other essential vitamins and minerals in a scientifically balanced form of particular value in maternity cases.

SUGGESTING a suitable diet for the patient recovering from illness or suffering from some form of gastric disorder can be a difficult problem under present conditions. Here Inglis Food is particularly helpful. Inglis is a highly nutritious oat food fortified with Iron, Calcium, Phosphorus, Vitamins D and B<sub>1</sub>. When combined with milk, Inglis Food establishes a desirable balance of fat and protein, and so protein stimulation of excess acid is avoided. Unlike many other cereals, Inglis Food is bland with a very low fibre content (0.20%). The fine processing of the flour removes this irritant. Inglis is an economical food: a 16-oz. tin costs 2/-.

APPOINTMENTS

HIS MAJESTY'S COLONIAL SERVICE COLONIAL MEDICAL SERVICE

The Colonial Medical Service offers an interesting career and provides unique opportunities for applying medical science in territories which are undergoing rapid development. There are immediate openings in many parts of the Colonial Empire and applications are invited from both men and women doctors who are British subjects and possess qualifications registrable in the United Kingdom. Medical Officers are usually appointed in the first instance for general duties. This implies all-round ability with a balanced outlook upon both preventive and curative medicine. Officers are also required for public health duties, in which case the D.P.H. or some experience of health work is necessary. Ample opportunities exist for field investigation, while officers with special aptitude are encouraged to obtain such higher qualifications as will enhance their value to the Service. Officers are from time to time seconded or appointed to medical laboratories in the larger territories. In the West African territories improved salary scales and conditions of service have recently been introduced. In most of the other territories the terms of service are being actively reviewed, and meanwhile temporary cost-of-living allowances are being paid over and above the existing salaries. At present initial basic salaries, i.e. irrespective of any cost-of-living allowance and of any credit that may be allowable for war service or professional experience, vary between £600 and £800 according to locality. There are, in addition, numbers of super-scale posts in the administrative and specialist grades which are normally filled by promotion within the Service. Free passages for an officer and wife are generally provided both on first appointment and when travelling on leave of absence. Where Government quarters are provided a small rent is usually payable. Good leave conditions and an adequate pension scheme are in force. The Colonial Medical Service is a unified service and members are eligible for transfer from one territory to another, either with or without promotion. Selected candidates may be required to take a course in tropical medicine either before proceeding overseas (in which case they would receive an allowance) or on first leave. Candidates for permanent service must have been born on or after January 1, 1908. Contract appointments are also available in certain territories for doctors born before this date. Further particulars may be obtained from, and applications should be addressed to, the Director of Recruitment (Colonial Service), Colonial Office, 15, Victoria Street, London, S.W.1.

BRITISH GUIANA MEDICAL SERVICE MEDICAL OFFICER FOR THE INTERIOR

Applications are invited for the post of Medical Officer in the interior of British Guiana from doctors seeking an active outdoor post which will involve work amongst primitive Amerindian people. The medical officer appointed will be constantly on tour, travelling by boat, horse, foot and plane, and will live under tent or tarpaulin in the forest, in Amerindian villages, or as a guest of the ever hospitable ranchers on the Brazilian border. The officer will have a base camp with bush house to which he will return after tours, which last from two to four weeks, depending on the nature of the area visited. The country is healthy provided that reasonable precautions are taken against malaria. The work of the medical officer will primarily be that of treating the indigenous inhabitants, surveying and investigating conditions affecting their health, and undertaking measures for improving these conditions. This will offer interesting opportunities for research in this field of tropical medicine and entomology. Apart from his professional duties the officer, if so inclined, will have opportunity for entomology, anthropology and natural history. For recreation there is good fishing and a certain amount of shooting. The medical officer must be a practitioner registered in the United Kingdom, should hold the Diploma in Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, must be of British nationality and not more than 35 years of age, and should be of excellent physique so as to carry out the continuous travelling inherent in the duties. The appointment will be on contract for two years, and may be extended up to five years in all. Salary £1,000 per annum, plus £60 cost-of-living allowance, non-pensionable. Travelling allowances up to a maximum of £340 per annum will be payable. Tentage and other accommodation will be provided. Free first-class passages to the Colony and return to England on satisfactory termination of the contract of a tour of two years' service. Income tax at local rates. Your bank offers a free service that enables you to invest your money in National Savings Certificates without trouble or effort. Whether you want to make a block purchase or invest a regular sum every month, you have only to sign a Banker's Order Form. The Bank will do the rest free of charge.

You can hold 1,000 of the new 10/- Savings Certificates—and they will become £650 in ten years' time. With Income Tax at 9/- this is equivalent to a taxable investment yielding £4 16s. 8d. per cent. If you are paying more than 9/- in the £ it is even more attractive.

Savings Certificates are a gilt-edged investment: ask your Bank Manager to tell you all about the easy way of buying them.
