U. R. T. I. PENBRITIN

He's better; his throat's stopped hurting; his eyes don't water any more; he's out of bed. It didn't last too long and his mother is relieved to get him back to school so soon. The record card shows a straightforward recovery from an Upper Respiratory Tract Infection. And it shows something far more important...

Penbritin is the answer-first time

Bacterial infection of the upper respiratory tract may be caused by a variety of organisms. Penbritin with its wide spectrum of activity can kill all the common pathogens responsible for Upper Respiratory Tract Infection. By prescribing Penbritin you can stop the spread of infection and prevent complications.

Penbritin has a high degree of safety and can be prescribed with confidence for patients of any age. The syrup formulation of Penbritin is well accepted, especially by children and it is highly probable that they will take the full prescribed course. The prescribing of five-day courses or longer, has been simplified by the introduction of 100 ml. bottles of Syrup and Syrup Forte.

In the treatment of Upper Respiratory Tract Infections, Penbritin is the answer—first time. And so often the only prescription needed.

Dosage:

Children under 2 years : 62.5 - 125 mg. 2 - 10 years : 125 - 250 mg. Adults : 250 mg.

Contra-indication: Penicillin allergy.

All dosages q.d.s. a.c. In severe infections these doses may be increased or Penbritin given by injection.

Side-effects: As with other penicillins.

Availability: Penbritin (ampicillin B.P.)
Syrup, 125 mg./5 ml.
Syrup Forte, 250 mg./5 ml.
Paediatric Tablets, 125 mg.
Capsules, 250 and 500 mg.

Enzyme Therapy in Perspective

Views on enzymes in medicine are wide and often vigorous but reliable clinical evidence<sup>1-5</sup> in recent years has highlighted their value in modern therapeutics, bringing to this science a new dimension.

For many years, interest in enzyme therapy has waxed and waned. New enzymes have been discovered, tried clinically, and doubtful results obtained; experience suggests that in many cases this rejection stemmed largely from poor formulation; often from prejudice; but mostly because of a basic lack of understanding of their potential. when used correctly.

Today, as experience of enzymes in clinical practice grows, physicians throughout the world are casting aside their earlier scepticism and regarding in a new light these interesting natural aids to better medicine, patient comfort, and national economy.

EARLY DEVELOPMENT

The last thirty years have seen a dramatic growth in enzymology—from a minor discipline of biochemistry to a major science; but although it has had an important impact upon medicine in diagnosis, there has been surprisingly little application to therapeutics—until the last decade—in spite of the wealth of information accumulated about these interesting structures.

It is true that pepsin was included in the British Pharmacopoeia of 1864 and with rennin, pancreatin, ptyalin, papain and malt diastase had a long period of use as digestive aids; but the products were often poorly formulated and of erratic potency and, rightly, soon fell into disrepute.

However, of these, pancreatin still makes a significant contribution to clinical medicine in the maintenance of children suffering from fibrocystic disease<sup>6-9</sup> of the pancreas. Indeed, it is interesting to note that today it is the enzymes of pancreatic origin from which most therapeutic utilization has stemmed; probably because of the great commercial interest in the pancreas as a source of insulin

In the 1930's other workers<sup>10-14</sup> opened up new possibilities for the manufacture of purified enzymes on a large scale—and their subsequent therapeutic use because of reliable potency and reduced risk of sensitization.

EARLY CLINICAL APPLICATION

The availability of purified enzymes in commercial quantities in the 1940's stimulated interest in their clinical application. It was natural therefore, that Armour—one of the major insulin producers at the time—should become a pioneer of enzyme therapy.

Building upon the work of the earlier scientists, they introduced in 1950 a range of topical enzyme products based upon the proteolytic effect of trypsin on necrotic tissue, tissue exudate and clotted blood when applied to infected wounds, burns and ulcers. Subsequently, a number of workers<sup>15,16</sup> published their findings confirming the value of these products.

Earlier, the benefit of instilling trypsin into the pleural cavity to clean tuberculous and other infected empyema had been demonstrated<sup>18</sup> and this work was later confirmed by others<sup>19–21</sup> also researching in the same field.

Such clinical applications were not developed solely by Armour; other laboratories also demonstrated the potential usefulness of enzymes and extended their use by the introduction of oral and parenteral forms. Combinations of streptokinase and streptodornase have been used topically, buccally, and by intramuscular injection for a similar range of indications as trypsin and well over a thousand clinical papers have been published showing the benefit of the enzyme, hyaluronidase, for promoting the re-absorption of excess tissue fluid and the spreading of injected fluids.

PROTEOLYTIC ENZYMES

Earlier development of the pancreatic enzyme trypsin led to the isolation and purification of alpha-chymotrypsin, and it was in 1956 that Armour introduced parenteral alpha-chymotrypsin (Chymar). Its effectiveness was reported by numerous clinicians and confirmed in double blind trials<sup>22–24</sup> which demonstrated its value in reducing postoperative oedema.

Early in 1958 a further important use for a proteolytic enzyme was initiated<sup>25</sup> involving the use of a weak chymotrypsin solution (Chymar-Zon) as an aid to lens removal in cataract surgery. This work has since been confirmed by others<sup>26</sup> and enzymatic zonlulysis now forms part of standard practice in many ophthalmic units throughout the world.

ORALLY EFFECTIVE ENZYMES

The value of proteolytic enzymes when administered parenterally having been demonstrated, it became clear that a more convenient oral form which would provide a similar clinical effect would be of immense value to physician and patient alike.

By 1960, after considerable clinical investigation Armour were able to demonstrate the effectiveness of an enteric-coated tablet containing a highly purified activated extract of the pancreatic enzymes, trypsin and chymotrypsin (Chymoral).

At first the oral administration of these proteolytic enzymes came under criticism from sceptics who argued that enzymes could not be absorbed from the intestine because of the size of the molecule; they also argued that the mode of action was unknown.

However, it is well recognised that intestinal absorption is not dependent upon molecule size alone, so this was not a valid argument. Furthermore, there is now evidence to demonstrate that both trypsin and chymotrypsin are absorbed after oral administration<sup>27-29</sup>.

Nevertheless, recent work<sup>30</sup> has highlighted one very important factor: for optimum absorption proteolytic enzymes must be administered before food. Administration after food may well have been the cause of earlier disappointment in clinical response.

It is true that, like corticosteroids and aspirin, for example, the precise mode of action of the proteolytic enzymes is unknown: largely because inflammatory processes are exceedingly complex and the whole concept of resolution of inflammation is not yet fully understood.

On the other hand, there is growing evidence that proteolytic enzymes and inhibitors are actively involved<sup>31–33</sup> particularly in tissue destructive diseases and injury. Enzyme treatment for the resolution of inflammation and associated oedema, whether the action is direct or indirect, is therefore logical. Moreover, the early animal work<sup>34–37</sup> has now been confirmed clinically by double-blind controlled trials<sup>1,2,4,5,38–45</sup>.

Thus, the use of enzymes as an aid to resolving inflammation is now growing rapidly and other proteolytic enzymes, such as bromelain and papain, have also been utilised with some success; although so far not supported by the same weight of clinical evidence as the proteolytic enzymes of pancreatic origin.

This growth of the use of enzymes in medicine demonstrates clearly the increasing importance of these substances as therapeutic agents. Nevertheless, enzyme chemistry is a vast subject—and many parts are still unexplored. It is therefore inevitable that some aspects of the mode of action of enzymes are difficult to explain.

For this reason, clinical evaluation must remain of primary importance in the proof of their effectiveness and, for the time being, exact explanations of their biochemical and physiological actions remain unknown.

ENZYMES IN SOFT TISSUE INJURY

Apart from wound closure and supportive dressings, the recovery of soft tissue injury following accidental or surgical trauma has by custom been regarded as something 'best left to nature', the palliatives of analgesics and bed-rest being generally the only treatment considered necessary.

Of course, nature will more often than not take corrective action but this is so in many spheres of medicine in which the physician is expected to—and does—assist nature in the alleviation of patient discomfort.

Perhaps one reason why a more positive approach has not been employed hitherto is because there has been insufficient awareness of the effect upon the economy of the nation in leaving recovery from trauma to 'take its natural course'.

TRAUMA—ECONOMICS OF TREATMENT

From the 'Morbidity Statistics from General Practice 1958' it is clear that in 1969 over 2 million patients may be expected to present to general practitioners for the treatment of accidental trauma—apart from those who go directly to hospital.

In respect of patients whose incapacity keeps them from their work this means that the cost of the economy may be estimated as some £16 million in sickness benefits alone.

Furthermore, incapacity of the busy housewife and mother can seriously affect the productivity of the salary or wage earner.

Add to this a further 3 million presentations in hospital for accidents and various forms of surgery, other than 'general surgery', that may also be anticipated, and a formidable cost to the economy begins to emerge.

Recent clinical evidence from controlled and/or doubleblind controlled trials<sup>1,2,4,5,30,39-46</sup> suggests that the prompt and correct use of enzymes in the treatment of fractures, sprains and soft tissue injury may shorten the period of patient incapacity by 40 to 50 per cent: thus considerably alleviating the cost to the nation; whether it be in sickness benefits alone, or the additional costs of treatment in hospital.

Armour believe they are making a worthwhile contribution to the national economy not only in making available for the physician products like CHYMORAL and CHYMAR to reduce the cost of treatment of trauma, but also in their continuing studies of enzyme utilisation in many spheres of medicine, their latest contribution being to demonstrate improved clinical efficiency when enzymes are administered with antibiotics (Chymocyclar).

The Outdoor Life

Though the announcement in the autumn by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the travel allowance for 1969 was still to remain at £50 was unhappy news for the general public, it was welcomed by the caravan and camping industries. For some years there has been a very steady progress by caravan manufacturers to raise the standards and quality of fittings and equipment and improve construction by the use of modern materials and methods. That they have been successful is shown by the considerable increase in exports—last year over a third of production went overseas, thus earning for Britain more than £5,000,000.

In these times the outdoor life has become an accepted way of holidaymaking for weekends as well as normal vacations for people in all walks of life and of all ages. A recent survey showed that nearly 50% of caravans were owned by professional men.

The main attraction of both the towed and the motor caravan is the complete freedom and mobility that they allow, combined with a high degree of comfort. No longer do the people justify themselves by saying "it is the gypsy in me". It is now a highly sophisticated and practical way of touring.

Caravans can either be bought or hired, and a visit to one of the centres can be a most pleasant experience as you will meet people who are not only enthusiastic themselves but most knowledgeable

If you are buying a caravan, and particularly if it is for the first time you would be well advised to select one with a well-known name such as Sprite, Eccles, Bessacarr with their Continental-Rally, or the Glen range of Thomsons; motor caravans are conversions chiefly on Ford, Austin or Bedford chassis.

There have been some new conversions on the Ford Escort van that will undoubtedly prove very popular. Three firms are now marketing their own models—Coachwork Conversion's Freedom Camper, Martin Walter's Elba and the Canterbury's Siesta. The Elba has a

Taking a caravan overseas is a great thrill right from the first moment when you reach the port and are directed to a special area away from the main throng of cars. The drill is normally first on and first off.

Where to go is becoming an increasing problem with many caravan users—both the towed and motorised versions—because the limit of possibilities is governed only by the length of the holidays. Most people, though, have to confine themselves to two or three weeks, and this usually means France, Spain, Portugal, and Italy for the sun lovers, and Switzerland and Austria for the lovers of mountain scenery. Lists of camping sites are always obtainable from the official tourist offices and the clubs. It is worthwhile studying these lists closely. Usually the sites close to the sea are full or at least very crowded, while only a short distance inland can be found some really beautiful positions with just the same amenities and plenty of elbow room.

positions with just the same amenities and plenty of elbow room. Something different? Have you tried Finland? It is a very beautiful country with countless lakes and forests. The main roads have largely been built or rebuilt over the past years and are never very crowded—not even in the height of summer. There are about 100 ferries serving the numerous lakes, and all of these are free. There are camping sites in or near all the bigger towns and chief holiday centres. There are more than 300 sites in all, and most of them have well-equipped buildings for all purposes. The Finnish Travel Association issue two leaflets on "Camping Sites in Finland" including a complete list with maps.

"Camping Sites in Finland" including a complete list with maps. If you do not wish to go quite so far a visit to Norway can be most rewarding. With its fjords, mountains, wooded valleys, and fascinating waterfalls all linked by a reasonably surfaced network of roads, caravanners have plenty of variety and liberty of movement as parking in many areas is permissible alongside the roads. There are, however, about 700 organized sites. The most popular and therefore the best equipped are to be found at Oslo, Bergen, Stavanger and Trondheim, all of which are conveniently situated for touring. Details can be obtained from the Norwegian National Tourist Office.

Bactrim† Roche: is highly effective in acute exacerbations of chronic bronchitis. It has an ultra-wide spectrum of activity; its dual action gives it great bactericidal potency, especially against Haemophilus influenzae-the most important pathogen in chronic bronchitis

In a trial Bactrim Roche* rapidly cleared purulent sputum and produced marked clinical improvement in every one of a group of 50 chronic bronchitics, where treatment with one or more antibiotics had already failed. Bactrim Roche produces its highly potent bactericidal activity from the potentiating action of its two components-trimethoprim and sulphamethoxazole. A leading article in the British Medical Journal on 18 May 1968 drew attention to the important therapeutic potential of this bactericidal synergy.

I. Proc. V int. Congr. Chemother., 1967, I, 293. *The formulation used in this trial was different from that which was subsequently found to produce the best results and which has now been adopted.

Ventolin INHALER

A different class of bronchodilator

MORE SELECTIVE · LONGER ACTING · MORE EFFECTIVE

A NEW STANDARD IN BRONCHODILATOR THERAPY

Previously available \( \mathbb{R}\)-adrenergic stimulants such as isoprenaline and orciprenaline act on the \( \mathbb{R}\)_1 receptors of heart muscle as well as on the \( \mathbb{R}\)_2 receptors of bronchial muscle. Consequently, undesirable increases in heart rate and pulse pressure sometimes occur when these drugs are used to produce bronchodilatation.

Ventolin is different: first because it is highly selective in its action, affecting primarily  $\beta_2$  receptors: second, because it is more effective than existing bronchodilators: and third, because it is longer acting.

MORE EFFECTIVE

Clinical trials have shown that Ventolin Inhaler is a more effective bronchodilator than isoprenaline or orciprenaline when given by inhalation; a comparison of the effects of inhaled Ventolin, isoprenaline, and orciprenaline on Forced Expiratory Volume in one second (FEV<sub>1</sub>) in severely asthmatic patients is shown in Fig. 1.

LONGER ACTING

Ventolin is unusually long acting, its effect persisting for at least four hours. By contrast, isoprenaline, even in large doses, has a characteristically intense but transient effect. In another study using whole-body plethysmography, inhalation of 100  $\,\mu g$  of Ventolin produced an almost immediate maximal increase in airway conductance which was sustained for four to six hours.

MORE SELECTIVE

No side effects have been reported with therapeutic doses of Ventolin Inhaler. In studies comparing Ventolin with isoprenaline, a major difference found was that Ventolin did not stimulate the heart or affect the blood pressure, even after inhalation of a relatively large dose. (See Fig. 2.)

MORE ACCEPTABLE TO PATIENTS

Patients expressed a marked preference for Ventolin Inhaler in double-blind studies comparing Ventolin with aerosols containing isoprenaline or orciprenaline.

SAFETY IN USE

Past experience suggests that misuse of aerosol bronchodilators by asthmatic patients may lead to dangerous effects on the heart or give a false sense of security to patients with incipient status asthmaticus. Ventolin Inhaler has no effect on the heart in therapeutic dosage and has a long duration of action. Both these properties provide additional margins of safety; the lack of cardiac effects should reduce any likelihood of deaths due to ventricular fibrillation and the long duration of action makes it possible for patients to realise in time if the drug is becoming less effective. Because an effective treatment with Ventolin Inhaler should last for at least four hours, patients have been advised to consult their doctor immediately if the effect lasts for less than three hours, so enabling the doctor to take timely action.

CLINICAL STUDIES

The onset of action of Ventolin by inhalation is rapid; near maximal bronchodilatation occurs within five minutes. The duration of action of Ventolin is much greater than that of isoprenaline. The results of a comparative study in severe asthmatics are summarised in Fig. 1. The effect of 1,000 µg of isoprenaline by inhalation on Forced Expiratory Volume in one second (FEV<sub>1</sub>) reached its peak at six minutes and thereafter diminished rapidly; The peak effect on Forced Vital Capacity (FVC) was reached a little later, but the pattern was otherwise similar. A significant increase in heart rate was noted soon after administration of isoprenaline. After 200 µg of Ventolin, however, near maximal response persisted for two to three hours and substantial improvement was still present after five hours. No side effects were observed after Ventolin.

CHEMISTRY

Ventolin is 2-t-butylamino-1-(4-hydroxy-3-hydroxymethyl)-phenylethanol. Its approved name is salbutamol.

The inhaler contains Ventolin base, suspended in microcrystalline form.

PHARMACOLOGY

Ventolin was discovered in the research laboratories of Allen & Hanburys Limited during a search for a  $\beta$ -adrenergic stimulant free from undesirable cardiovascular actions. Replacement of the 3–OH group in isoprenaline by the primary alcohol group, -CH2OH, gave rise to a new series of potent  $\beta$ -adrenergic stimulants. Ventolin was chosen for development because of its highly selective action on bronchial muscle, its lack of effect on heart muscle and its long duration of action.

ANIMAL STUDIES

In all the species used, Ventolin was a more potent bronchodilator than isoprenaline when administered by aerosol or by mouth and about equally active by intravenous injection. It differs from isoprenaline in being able to prevent bronchospasm without having obvious effects on the cardiovascular system. Ventolin is unusually long acting because it is not affected by catechol o-methyl transferase, an enzyme which rapidly inactivates isoprenaline in the body.

HUMAN STUDIES

Studies on asthmatic volunteers using a whole-body plethysmograph revealed that doses of 100  $\mu g$  of Ventolin by inhalation produced a substantial and almost immediate increase in airway conductance which was sustained for several hours. In normal volunteers, doses of 400  $\mu g$  by inhalation had no effect on heart-rate, ECG or blood pressure. 200  $\mu g$  of isoprenaline had marked cardiovascular effects in the same subjects.

INDICATIONS

Ventolin Inhaler is indicated for the relief of bronchospasm in:

Bronchial asthma of all types
Chronic bronchitis
Emphysema

DOSAGE

One or two inhalations, repeated four-hourly if required. The bronchodilator effect of each administration of Ventolin Inhaler lasts for at least four hours and more frequent use should be unnecessary. This long duration of action provides a margin of safety. The patient can readily recognise any reduction in the length of action and should be instructed to consult a doctor if the effect of a previously adequate dose lasts for less than three hours.

The patient's instruction leaflet enclosed with each Ventolin Inhaler therefore contains the following paragraph:

'Dosage; use Ventolin Inhaler only as directed by your doctor. He will tell you how many puffs to take for a treatment. An effective treatment with Ventolin Inhaler lasts for about four hours. Consult your doctor immediately if the effect lasts for less than three hours. No more than eight treatments should be taken in any 24-hour period without consulting your doctor.'

SIDE EFFECTS

No side effects have been reported from Ventolin given by inhalation in therapeutic doses.

Doses greatly in excess of those needed for full bronchodilatation could cause short-lived secondary effects such as peripheral vasodilatation, minor increase in pulse rate, and skeletal muscle tremor.

CONTRA-INDICATIONS

There are at present no known contraindications to the use of Ventolin. However, care should be taken with patients suffering from hypertension, myocardial insufficiency or thyrotoxicosis. Notice should be taken of recent suggestions that the administration of any drug during the first trimester of pregnancy is undesirable.

PRESENTATION

Ventolin Inhaler is a metered aerosol, delivering  $100\,\mu g$  of Ventolin per inhalation, with a specially designed actuator. Each canister provides 200 inhalations.

'Saluric' can help

in the premenstrual syndrome

Women suffering from premenstrual tension with oedema cannot avoid the tiresome and inevitable signs and symptoms of this common condition, which may last for 7 to 10 days every month, prior to the menses. Because many of the distressing symptoms may be directly related to fluid retention, effective diuresis usually brings prompt relief.

'Saluric' can relieve swelling of the ankles, breast engorgement, and fullness of the abdomen. It may well help to alleviate the concomitant irritability and nervousness. 'Saluric' has been proved by 10 years of clinical experience to be a dependable diuretic which can be used for those few days every month to control premenstrual tension with oedema.

Each tablet of 'Saluric' contains 500 mg chlorothiazide BP. Detailed information is available to physicians on request.

An announcement from Delandale Laboratories

The first controlled release preparation of lithium carbonate in the world

Patients in the depressive phase of disorders of affect are notoriously difficult to treat and are often resistant to antidepressant drugs. In these cases, and in patients with frequently recurring attacks of depression or mania, published reports indicate that lithium is often of benefit as a prophylactic. It is particularly important, however, that treatment with lithium salts should be supervised by a specialist with facilities for laboratory control until wider experience has been gained of its use in long-term prophylaxis. PRIADEL represents the latest development in mood control by lithium salts. It is the first controlled release preparation of lithium carbonate in the world, and the first product specifically formulated for long-term mood control using a single daily dosage regime. It is now available for use under specialist supervision. Physicians in general practice who wish to follow the literature on lithium therapy, and the characteristics of the new product PRIADEL, are invited to write for full details.

Sustanon makes a man a man again

in body and in mind

When gonadal activity is inadequate the young or middle-aged male may demonstrate diminished genital structure, and response, to the point of impotence. Understandably the repercussions reach far beyond the purely physical – often playing havoc with the patient's psyche, marriage and career.

Every physician knows how complex is diagnosis of the condition, with the patient frequently hiding the facts not only from his doctor but from himself. Even when the diagnosis is established, therapy is not straightforward and many factors must be considered. Nevertheless with Sustanon a clear, early and sustained response may occur at all levels, physical, mental, and emotional.

Sustanon is preferable to testosterone propionate as of course no single testosterone ester provides both lengthy activity and rapid onset of action. This Sustanon does. Its prolonged activity is such that only an occasional injection is needed to maintain the required therapeutic level.

How would you like to get out of bed 3 or 4 times on a cold night-

In dealing with urinary frequency in the elderly the physician faces two problems. Such patients may often feel a need to micturate when urine volume is quite small or a fraction of the bladder's capacity: Cetiprin helps the doctor to control this need by blocking the innervation and increasing bladder capacity. The second problem is more intractable and requires the breaking of the established habit of frequent urination. In such cases the physician expects no immediate marked response and persists with treatment for at least 14 to 21 days. Cetiprin, time and the doctor's tolerance are all needed to overcome urinary frequency.

The alert physician recognizes that frequency is more than a distressing condition per se. He sees in it a common cause of interrupted sleep and consequent impaired physique, and of lower morale - further conditions making in-roads into his already precious time. He sees - and prescribes

An aid to oral hygiene

Maintenance of oral hygiene during the postoperative period, especially among geriatric patients, is obviously essential. But at the same time this can prove to be somewhat timeconsuming for the nursing staff.

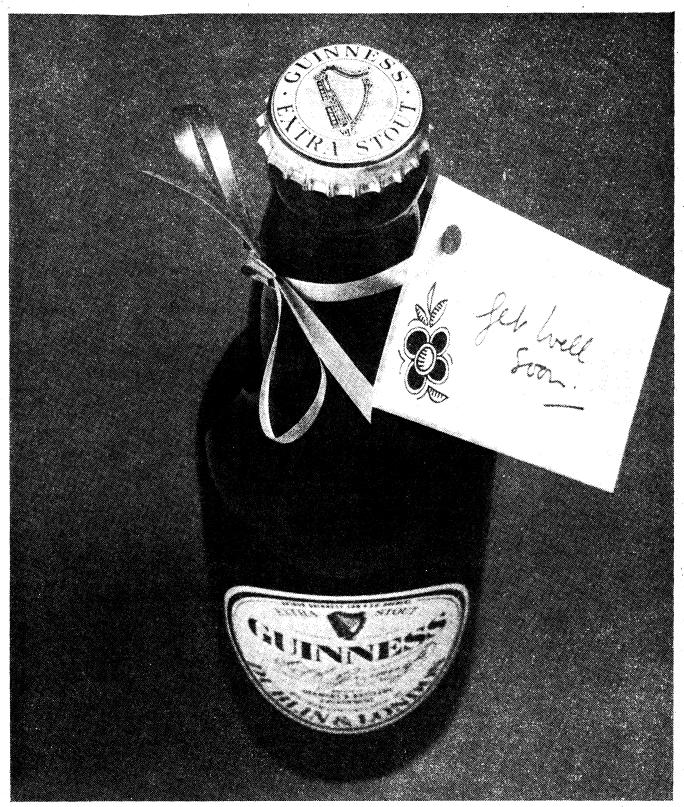

However, recent experience in a London hospital has shown that the patient can help to provide his own nursing care, with the minimum of effort.

This experience covers patients who are fed intravenously and post-operative cases who find normal eating and drinking difficult. These patients often exhibit signs of mouth infection very quickly, and treatment for this can often cause considerable discomfort.

A more pleasant treatment is possible in many cases, for it has been found that giving the patient chewing gum promotes salivary gland activity. Patients are encouraged to chew gum at two-hourly periods, and this treatment frequently allays the symptoms and produces a considerable improvement in the condition of the tongue and mucosa. Quite striking results have been noted after carrying out this treatment for a 24-hour period.
