ment and detention of persons alleged to be montally unsound, and fit subjects for surveillance."—Extract From Proface.

"We may safely say that those who follow the instructions given will not have to plead ignorance of the law as an excuse for its violation, for they will it d in it full and precise directions as to all they need to know respecting the care of the insane, either in public institutions or in private houses, while a very copicus index will enable them at any moment to turn to the point they may desire to refer to."—Inc. Pros. & Circular.

"We anticipate that it will become the rade in vium of practitioners in lunacy."—Law Times.

"It is the first attempt of the kind to embody in a text-book important facts pertaining to insunity in its medico-legal aspect. As a faithful guide in all matters connected with the treatment of lunatics, private and public, it is most invaluable. This work will be as esential to the, physician and lawyer as the 'Medical Directory' and 'Law List' are to members of those professions. It should be found in the library of every barrister and solicitor, as well as physicians and surgeons. It constitutes a complete rade mecan on the subject to which it relates. A clear expostion of the various Acts of Parliament connected with the confinement of persons alleged to be insane is given, and plain and easily understood instructions are laid down for the guidance of medical men when called upon to assist in placing under legal restricts persons alleged to be in a proface of the surgestion of the proface of medical men when called upon to assist in placing under legal restricts persons alleged to be insane is given, and plain and easily understood instructions are laid down for the guidance of medical men when called upon to assist in placing under legal restricts persons alleged to be insane and and a silvent and plain and easily understood instructions are laid down for the guidance of medical men when called upon to assist the guidance of medical men when called upon to assist in placing under legal restraint persons alleged to be insane, unfit to be at large, or to manage their pro-perty."—John Bull.
