KEPLER EXTRACT OF MALT.

"As an article of diet in wasting diseases, the Kepler Extract is liked by patients, and often taken readily when other forms are not retained. It is a good plan to begin with a teaspoonful three times a day, but the dose may be rapidly increased to a tablespoonful or more. One of the best vehicles for taking the Extract of Malt is a little warm milk, but some people prefer it alone, whilst others like it with soda water. It speedily improves the powers of assimilation, and in cases of consumption, scrofula, and many wasting diseases, especially of children, a wonderful improvement in the patient's condition may be noticed after even a fortnight's treatment. The introduction of the Kepler Extract of Malt is a decided advance in therapeutics."—Report of the London Medical Record.

Gastric Dyspepsia.

Intestinal Dyspepsia.

Bilious Dyspepsia.

"British Medical Journal's" Report.

The only form of Cod
Liver Oil to be taken in hot weather.

Infant Mortality.

FAIRCHILD PEPTONISING POWDERS.

"* * * Have tried five different kinds of food, and milk prepared with these is the only kind that we have tried that our baby can digest. Have tried to change three times, but with bad results each time."

AGENTS PRESCRIBED FOR DYSPEPSIA.

The Pepsin Tabloids (1 gr. in each) and the Peptonic Tablets (Pepsin, Pancreatin, Lime Lacto-Phos. aa. eq. pts.) are prescribed for gastric dyspepsia; the Zymine Tabloids (3 gr. in each) in intestinal dyspepsia; and the Compound Zymine Tabloids (Zymine 2 gr., Ipecac. 1-10 gr., and Bismuth 3 gr.) in bilious dyspepsia.

SODA-MINT "TABLETS."

(Sodium Bicarb., 4 grs., Ammon. Carb., $\frac{1}{4}$ gr., Ol. Menth. Pip., $\frac{1}{6}$ gr.).

Soda-Mint is very prompt and efficient in correcting acidity. This is obviously a very efficient combination. The tablets are manufactured with the utmost neatness and perfection."

DOSE.—From one to three tablets, to be swallowed with water. Supplied in bottles of 25, 65, and 100 Tablets, at 1/9, 1/3, and 1/10.

KEPLER SOLUTION.

The Kepler Solution is as pleasant as fresh, sweet cream, and high authorities state that 5 lbs. of it do more good than 35 lbs. of the oil alone. The Lancet says:—"Many can take it who cannot take the oil." The British Medical Journal reports:—"The oil is agreeably disguised, its nutritive powers are greatly increased, and it is rendered easy of digestion."

ZYMIC (FAIRCHILD).

(For preparing all kinds of predigested Invalid Foods).

The British Medical Journal, referring to ZYMIC and the pancreatic method of predigestion, says:—"Its introduction has probably done more than any other therapeutic measure of recent times to lessen infant mortality."

Supplied in $\frac{1}{4}$ and 1 oz. bottles.

ERRATUM.—In Mr. Blenkarn's letter on the tincture of the muriate of iron, in the JOURNAL of July 9th, p. 96, the quantity of ferri sesquicarb. should be 3*vj*, not ij.

BEER TO DISGUISE THE TASTE OF OILS.

DR. P. KEELAN writes: Referring to M. Fleury's recommendation (contained in the JOURNAL for July 9th) of beer as a good vehicle for castor oil, permit me to say that I have been for the last twenty-nine years in the habit of using stout as a vehicle for castor and cod-liver oils. I do not, as M. Fleury does, mix the oil with the vehicle, but merely seat the oil on the stout (which should have a head on it); thus the last taste experienced will be that of the vehicle, and not of the oil. This "wrinkle" was given to me many years ago by the late Dr. Hallahan, of Harcourt Street, Dublin.

MEDICAL APPRENTICESHIP.

DR. SPENCER T. SMYTH (Forest Hill, S.E.), writes: I think it best that all who intend entering the profession should be apprenticed for eighteen months or two years, according to the age of the pupil, to a general practitioner, with whom every facility should be given for being taught dispensing and the ordinary routine of a surgery. During that time he should make himself somewhat familiar with materia medica and the rudiments of chemistry. Prior to apprenticeship, he should have passed the Preliminary Examination in Arts. The four years' study at a recognised hospital and college should be undergone, as now required by the regulations of the examining bodies. I consider no student under the age of eighteen years, at least, ought to be admitted into the wards of a hospital, and it is most desirable he should be somewhat acquainted with elementary work. As to myself, I was an articled pupil in June, 1837, so I am no novice in medical requirements.

STOPPING UNQUALIFIED PRACTICE.

MR. J. BLACHFORD (London Hospital) writes: Enclosed is an advertisement which is being circulated in the streets by a man who walks about bearing a placard to the same effect. Cannot something be done to remedy this sort of thing?

* * * Mr. Blachford should communicate with J. R. Upton, Esq., 14, Austin Friars, the Clerk of the Apothecaries' Society, who will, we feel sure, inquire into the case, and, if there is evidence of unqualified practice, take steps to stop it.

HAY FEVER.

DR. T. H. MOORHEAD (Cootehill, Co. Cavan), writes: Twelve months ago I called attention in your columns to the benefit I had personally derived from the use of small doses of morphine hypodermically in the above ailment. In the summer of 1886 I only began it near the termination of the attack, but obtained so much ease that I determined this year to commence its use as soon as the catarrh became troublesome. I presume most sufferers from hay fever have, like myself, had an exceptionally bad time of it. Owing to the great heat and want of rain, the grasses all flowered at once, as it were, and instead of the attack being, as usual, spread over six or seven weeks, its whole force was concentrated into four, and in my case the asthma began about June 16th, and terminated suddenly before the end of the month—a circumstance I never, during my thirty years' experience of it, can recollect to have occurred before; but during the twelve days the asthma continued, I had it night and day—another most exceptional condition, evidently due to the concentration of the pollen poison. The only remedy I tried this year was morphine; indeed, I had long given up attempting to get relief from drugs, the effect of which was generally to make me worse. Last year I advised the addition of atropine to the morphine, but this season I soon discovered that by drying the nasal mucous membrane it was doing more harm than good. Beginning with doses of one-twentieth of a grain of morph. tart. twice daily, I had gradually to increase them up to one-tenth of a grain three times a day, beyond which I did not find it necessary to go in order to obtain reasonable comfort and sufficient ease to enable me to attend to my work. The relief to the asthma was even greater than to the catarrh, and the dose of morphine was not followed by the anorexia and depression left after smoking datura tanta, my former remedy.

Probably the subcutaneous administration of morphine will not afford all sufferers the same degree of relief it has to me; some may need much larger doses than I have required to produce equal effects, but I cannot help believing that it will rob the month of June of the terror with which it is looked forward to by many unfortunates like myself.

DR. DANIEL BRADLEY (Dudley), writes: I have a patient who has for many years been a martyr to hay fever, apparently in consequence of an hereditary tendency to gout. He is a most abstemious man, taking no alcohol for many years, and eating very little meat, less every year, so that he's practically a vegetarian from experiment. His hay fever has occasionally in previous years been relieved for a time by arsenic and alkalies, but for two or three years past this has been of no service, and he has had to allow it to exhaust itself. On reading the Cavendish Lecture of Sir Andrew Clark in the JOURNAL of June 11th, I at once wrote to him, advising him to try the local treatment there recommended, namely, the carbolic mixture, whilst still taking the arsenic and alkalies. A few days ago I received a letter from him; and as I think the matter one of much interest, subjoin an extract, and shall be pleased for you to publish it if you think it of sufficient importance; it is very characteristic of the man:

"Well, I have tried the mopping mixture, and, as the chemist said who made it up, 'it is a powerful compound.' The first brushful on each application is very fiery to the nose, but, strange to say, succeeding brushing in the same nostril is not felt, and one imagines all is going to be 'jam.' It isn't. I used it on going to bed, and it kept me awake half the night applying the kerchief 'continual,' like Androcles and the Lion at the waxworks. Also 'twas very fiery. Nevertheless, with mixture as before, I have no doubt it is a blessed cure. I used it four alternate nights, June 24th to 30th, during which time I was tormented more or less, less on July 1st, so I thought I would give it an extra day's grace; this was Sunday, the 3rd, when I spent the whole of the afternoon in the broiling sun of one of the hottest days we have had in these parts this summer. But I felt no ill-effects, and this was an exceedingly severe test. A fortnight previously, on a similar day, the sun brought out a frightful attack, and I could scarcely see where I was walking. This last week I have felt very little indeed of it. Got amongst some straw and dust on Friday, which set me sneezing, but this soon passed away, and I think it unnecessary to mop any more. Next year, if I am a victim, I will start the mopping business on the first symptom of attack. I had given this to the 15th to exhaust itself." This letter, I should say, was dated July 11th.
