

A SEARCH FOR A HOMŒOPATH.—The following printed circular has been forwarded to us.

“ ——— October 1865.

“Dear Sir,—I write to inform you that Mr. ——— died here suddenly, thereby leaving us without a homœopathic practitioner. During the four months Mr. ——— has been here, he got into good practice, having made an income at the rate of at least £400 per annum, which was regularly increasing. I write this to ask if you know of any gentleman of experience and respectability who would be likely to settle among us, to carry on Mr. ———’s practice, and to ask you to mention our want to any gentleman you may consider suitable.

“Yours respectfully, ———.”

Weiss's Illustrated Catalogue, containing nearly 800 engravings of Surgeons' Instruments and Apparatus, classified for their various purposes. Price, 5s.
62, Strand, London.

“This catalogue has many and great merits. It is modest, truthful, carefully arranged, and extremely well illustrated. In the great majority of cases the name of the surgeon is appended to the modification which he has introduced, and frequently other makers' names are honourably attached to instruments which they first originated. These are large principles of honour which we are glad to see strictly observed in this catalogue.”—Lancet, September 12th, 1863.

TO ADVERTISERS.

British Medical Journal. —
Office, 37, GREAT QUEEN STREET, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C. Published every Saturday.

The BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL is transmitted direct from the Office to between two and three thousand Members of the British Medical Association in all parts of the United Kingdom, among whom are the Medical Officers of most Hospitals and Dispensaries and the majority of the leading members of the profession. It is also taken in by many Libraries and Medical Societies. As a medium for immediate communication with the Medical Profession, it offers excellent facilities to advertisers of books, drugs, instruments, situations, etc.

Advertisements ought to be delivered at the Office on or before the Thursday preceding publication; and, if not paid for at the time should be accompanied by a respectable reference.

Post-Office Orders are to be made payable at the Western Central District Office, High Holborn, to THOMAS JOHN HONEYMAN (the Publisher), 37, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, W.C.
