

18 YEARS' TEST OF Roboleine

EVER since "Roboleine" was introduced to the Medical Profession the demand for it has steadily increased. This fact proves beyond doubt that both in constitution and in balance "Roboleine" conforms to the ideas of the general body of Medical Practitioners.

Those members of the Profession who have not yet proved for themselves the excellent properties of "Roboleine," are asked to consider its constituents, and to write for clinical sample and literature.

ROBOLEINE CONSISTS OF:

MARROW from the long bones of prime oxen, RED MARROW from the rib bones, "CREAM of MALT" (described by "The Lancet" as the "crème de la crème of malt extracts"), Egg Yolk, and Neutralized Lemon Juice.

The Governor of the London Hospital says:

"The effect on some of our anæmic and rickety children has been MAGICAL."

Clinical Sample and Literature on request.
