Clinical Memoirs on Diseases

of WOMEN. By ALFRED H. MCCLINTOCK, M.D., F.R.C.S., Late Master of the Dublin Lying-in Hospital; Honorary Fellow of the Obstetrical Society of London, etc., etc.

"This book well deserves its title. It is eminently clinical. The skilled practitioner will recognise in its descriptions the faithful representations of diseases he has himself observed, interpreted by a mind singularly sagacious, calm, and free from prejudice. The Student, on the other hand, on reading the book, may almost imagine that he is walking from bed to bed, observing typical cases under the immediate guidance of an accomplished clinical teacher.... In taking leave for the present of our author—we hope not for long—we feel bound to express our deep obligation to him for the instruction derived from the perusal of his work. We can confidently recommend it to our readers as a mine of information at once full, sound, and of enduring value."—British and Foreign Medico-Chirurgical Review.

On the Diseases of Women, including those of PREGNANCY and CHILD-BED. By FLEETWOOD CHURCHILL, M.D., President of the King and Queen's College of Physicians.

"The Edition before us, bringing the subject down to the present day, is well worthy of the distinguished author. The numerous woodcuts which illustrate the text, many of which are new in this edition, enhance greatly its value, which, indeed, we can scarcely over-rate. So familiar is his work to the Profession of Great Britain and Ireland, and so brilliant is the reputation of its author, that anything we could say in its favour would simply be a waste of words."—Glasgow Med. Journal.
