ANTIBIOTICS AND THE INTESTINAL FLORA

Treatment with broad spectrum antibiotics suppresses the normal flora, which may be replaced by abnormal resistant organisms causing diarrhoea.

This change can be prevented or reversed by the implantation of Lactobacillus acidophilus which has been rendered antibiotic-resistant, and is thus able to multiply freely under these abnormal conditions. This organism itself forms an antibiotic which may contribute to its rapid preponderance over other species.<sup>1, 2</sup>

Oral treatment with antibiotic-resistant L. acidophilus in the form of ENPAC has been shown to eliminate Candida from the faeces of infants with antibiotic-induced diarrhoea, with relief of symptoms succeeded by rapid gain in weight<sup>3, 4</sup> and greatly to reduce the numbers of staphylococci in the faeces of patients treated with tetracyclines.<sup>5</sup>

Regd. Trade Mark

Synadrin is a specific coronary vasodilator, and is chemically unrelated to any known treatment for coronary disease. Its specific activity has been demonstrated in animal experiments<sup>11-17</sup> and it has been tested in over 1,000 patients.<sup>1-10</sup> Results of trials so far reported have been promising and Synadrin has been described as "an effective drug for treating angina pectoris."<sup>1</sup>

Effective and safe

Synadrin has been shown to reduce the frequency of anginal attacks. It is particularly successful in patients with coronary ischaemia with or without previous infarction. It produces prolonged improvement of the coronary blood supply, and consistent treatment over a period of weeks produces the best results. Synadrin is well tolerated and its safety has been shown by use in more than 1,000 patients over the last two years.

Dosage

Treatment may be initiated with 2 tablets, three times daily, reducing after three days to a maintenance dosage of 1 tablet two or three times daily.

Presentation

Synadrin is presented as tablets, each containing 15 mg. of prenylamine lactate in bottles of 30 and 150 at basic NHS prices of 8/8d. and 34/8d. (subject to P.T.). Synadrin is known in some other countries as Segontin.

'Actomol', a new and powerful inhibitor of monoamine oxidase, has been on extensive clinical trial since 1960.

Experience has shown that it is:

- A highly effective drug in the treatment of depressive episodes.
- Quick-acting, providing relief in 7-14 days.

'Actomol' is indicated, either alone or as an adjuvant to E.C.T., in the treatment of all forms of depressive illness.

NOTE: Monoamine oxidase inhibitors in general have been shown to potentiate the actions of many drugs. The risk of combining 'Actomol' with other drugs should, therefore, be borne in mind.

NEW REFERENCE BOOK ON ERYTHROCIN

(Erythromycin, Abbott)

REGD.

Abbott announce the publication of an important new edition of the physician's reference book on Erythrocin (erythromycin, Abbott). In the ten years that this major antibiotic has been available much new information has been published on its wide clinical spectrum, its lack of toxicity and the low level of bacterial resistance. At the same time, the production of new antibiotics has made it necessary to reconsider the place of Erythrocin in clinical usage. All these points are dealt with in this new edition of the reference book, which contains a bibliography of some 200 articles. Copies are now available to the medical profession from

ABBOTT LABORATORIES LIMITED • QUEENBOROUGH • KENT

Erythrocin is supplied as 100 mg and 250 mg Filmtabs; 100 mg/5 ml and 200 mg/5 ml suspension; 300 mg vials Lactobionate for intravenous injection and 50 mg/1 ml Erythrocin for intramuscular injection.

Exploration of the common bile duct was a vexed problem and in at least 20% of cases of calculous cholecystitis stones were present in the duct. Many were silent for years, and were almost certainly derived from the gall-bladder. Recurrent symptoms after cholecystectomy were due to retained rather than recurrent stones although theoretically stones would form whenever there was bile. Choledcho-duodenostomy was better than sphincterotomy for dealing with persistent duct stones, and, provided the surgical fistulae were large enough, cholangitis did not follow. Successful cholecystectomy in acute cholecystitis depended on the experience and skill of the surgeon and his wisdom in refraining from radical procedures if conditions were not suitable. In biliary surgery the operation must be comprehensive, leaving no need for further intervention.

Operative Cholangiography

Mr. CONRAD LATTO (Reading) advocated operative cholangiography as an absolute routine. This would result in altering the indications for duct exploration and in fewer stones being left behind. After isolation of the cystic duct, the cystic artery was tied. An olivary-headed U.S.A. ureteric catheter was then introduced into the duct and tied in at the 3-centimetre mark. The catheter was filled with saline to eliminate air bubbles, and after removal of radio-opaque material from the field 4 ml. of 35% "uriodone" (35% diodone) was injected. A film was then taken and after injection of a further 4 ml. a second film was exposed. In this way the whole duct system was outlined. The table should be rotated 20° to the right to avoid an overlying lumbar shadow, and the anaesthetist should stop the patient's respiration during exposure. Cholecystectomy was performed while the films were developed. If choledochotomy was done a post-exploratory film with dye introduced via the T-tube was taken at the end of the procedure. Cholangiography avoided fruitless exploration of ducts, avoided leaving stones behind, might be helpful in elucidating anatomical abnormalities, and might show up tumours.

Discussion

Opening the discussion, Mr. D. C. CORRY (Oxford) stressed the importance of a careful history in gall-stone disease. Occasionally pain in the back was the only symptom. He found a modification of Boas's sign, tenderness on pressure over the right twelfth rib as it crossed the lateral border of the erector spinae, to be of value. The sign had been positive in one-third of 300 cases and helped in diagnosis in 10%. Mr. G. E. MOLONEY (Oxford) discussed the repeatedly negative cholecystogram in patients with right upper quadrant pain. Five to ten years later one-third of such patients were symptom-free but one-third had similar symptoms. He did not feel that operative cholangiography justified itself, and preferred suture of the common duct with drainage of the sub-hepatic pouch to an indwelling T-tube. Mr. A. STAVELEY GOUGH (Watford) preferred the gall-bladder as the site for injecting the dye in cholangiography to the cystic or common duct. The gall-bladder was then more easily preserved for anastomosis in a short-circuit procedure.

Mr. A. S. TILL (Oxford) spoke of the remarkably high incidence of gall-stones in Scandinavia: this was confirmed by Mr. COOKE. Professor HARDING RAINS thought a possible explanation was the high intake of sucrose which reduced bile acids. Mr. L. A. H. MCSHINE (Trinidad) asked about the value of the choledochoscope, which Mr. A. DICKSON WRIGHT (London) condemned. The last speaker advised transduodenal exploration of the common duct, but Mr. G. ARMITAGE (Leeds) disliked this approach. Mr. G. E. NEVILL (Nairobi), Dr. C. W. SILK (N. Rhodesia), and Mr. J. B. G. MUIR (Tasmania) commented on the varying incidence of cholelithiasis among different races.

Early Diagnosis in General Practice

With Mr. R. V. COOKE (Bristol) in the chair, Dr. D. C. CORRY (Oxford) and Professor J. B. ATKINS (London) discussed diseases of the breast. Mr. CORRY spoke on breast cancer, where early diagnosis and surgery afforded the best chance of cure. A lump in the breast was the common presentation and he advocated excisional biopsy. About 45% of patients with cancer admitted to pain or discomfort, although this often followed the finding of the lump. This pain might be a continuous ache unrelated to menstruation, or a momentary pricking sensation. Severe breast pain was almost certainly due to fibroadenosis and therefore carried a good prognosis. Significant features in examination included deviation or elevation of the nipple, and dimpling of the skin. A carcinoma had a nodular surface projecting through the breast fat, and with the flat of the hand the hard texture could be distinguished from the rest of the breast. Fixation of the tumour to the breast tissue was considered of prime importance: the ordinary scirrhus tumour was found to be fixed in all planes to the surrounding breast, whereas a simple tumour such as a fibroadenoma was freely mobile within the breast.

Professor HEDLEY ATKINS referred to recurring subareolar abscess or mammary fistulae. A possible aetiology was duct blockage at the nipple, duct dilatation, infection, and bursting of the abscess through the thin skin at the areolar margin. A probe could be passed through this point up to the nipple, and the lesion treated by excision and saucerization. An inverted nipple seemed to predispose to the condition. Discussing discharge from the nipple he emphasized the importance of testing the discharge for haemoglobin. If possible the precise duct involved was isolated and then a microdocheotomy was performed. When the duct could not be isolated the haemoglobin-negative discharges were treated expectantly: the discharge would then either stop, become localized to one duct—when microdocheotomy was advocated, or a lump would form—leading to biopsy. If the discharge was haemoglobin-positive, in young women an expectant programme was pursued; in women over the age of 45 such was the risk of an underlying carcinoma that local mastectomy was advised. In five such cases two were found to have latent carcinoma.

Mr. F. H. AITKEN WALKER (Reading) led a discussion on early diagnosis of acute appendicitis. There were two types, of which non-obstructive appendicitis led to the usual symptoms of pain, malaise, pyrexia, and vomiting. Local pain occurred only when the peritoneal surface was involved. The end-result was resolution, or local or general peritonitis. Obstructive appendicitis often resulted in gangrene with peritonitis. The speaker emphasized the importance of a silent interval when colic lessened owing to muscle coat paralysis. In most cases diagnosis was easy, but might be delayed by reluctance on the part of the patient to seek medical advice.

He was followed by Mr. A. DICKSON WRIGHT (London), who, in the course of a hilarious exposition on the pitfalls of diagnosis, stressed the difficulties at the extremes of age, in the obese, and in alcoholics. Malposition of the appendix might produce bizarre symptoms, and the advent of appendicitis in the course of another illness had to be guarded against. He advised that the patient should test himself for the point of maximum tenderness, and found a coughing test of value in localizing pain.

Goitre

Mr. GEORGE ARMITAGE (Leeds) discussed the diagnosis and treatment of toxic goitre. Significant advances in the last 20 years had included the introduction of antithyroid drugs, particularly carbimazole, which enabled the patient to be rendered euthyroid before surgery. The use of radioiodine as a diagnostic and therapeutic agent was discussed. As a therapeutic tool it was of value in recurrent thyrotoxicosis or as an alternative to surgery in the elderly. The dose was difficult to determine, and myxoedema could occur. The emergence of anaesthetics as a specialty had proved of enormous value to the thyroid surgeon. Surgery was now safe, with a negligible mortality, whereas 40 years ago the mortality had been as high as 20%. He then reviewed a series of 1,620 thyroidectomies, of which 65% were for toxic goitre. There were eight deaths in the toxic group.

Mr. A. S. TILL (Oxford) discussed the rarer forms of thyroid disease. Cancer should be suspected in solitary nodules at any age, even if they had been present for a considerable time. Sudden enlargement in a pre-existing goitre, or the rapid development of goitre, especially in men, should lead to a fear of malignancy. About 7% of solitary nodules were malignant, and in the majority of cases surgery would result in cure, as this form of thyroid cancer carried a good prognosis. Radioiodine might be of value in demonstrating a "hot" nodule, which was rarely malignant. In the case of the multinodular goitre malignancy was rare, but alteration in the size or consistency of such a gland should be considered suspect. Such cases tended to select themselves by seeking medical advice, and should not be lightly dismissed.

Hashimoto's lymphadenoid goitre was an example of autoimmune disease and occurred

Availability of Vitamins in Yeast

Deficiencies of single factors of the Vitamin B Group do not occur. Accordingly, even if a deficiency condition appears to result from the lack of an individual factor of the group and it is considered necessary to give intensive treatment with this factor, the entire Vitamin B Complex should always be administered concurrently.

It is, however, extremely important, in view of suggestions in recent publications, that the vehicle selected as a source of the entire B Complex does not withhold its vitamin content from the patient.

Human experiments show that the rich, natural vitamin potency of Aluzyme is totally available to the human system.

● Aluzyme is not advertised to the public and may be prescribed under J.S.C. Classification Category "S."

QUESTIONS, PLEASE?

Menstrual protection and comfort

Q Many patients ask about Tampax because they feel it would be more convenient to use than a perineal pad. From the standpoints of comfort, convenience and efficiency can Tampax be recommended?

A Yes, definitely. Tampax comes in a disposable container-applicator which, if properly used, ensures that the tampon will be inserted as it should be—above the sphincter muscles. This area of the vagina is virtually insensitive so the user is literally unaware of the presence of Tampax.<sup>1</sup> Absence of the restrictive, binding harness of straps and pins that is required with the use of the perineal pad adds greatly to the convenience, comfort and peace of mind of the Tampax user. Many leading research workers have reported that most patients preferred tampons over perineal pads because of the great comfort they afford.<sup>2-4</sup>

Tampax is efficient because of the principle on which it is based. A woman doctor says, "tampons are far more efficient (than sanitary towels); partly because they are applied nearer the source, partly because the material of which they are made seems to be more absorbent".<sup>5</sup>

A Tampax tampon and its container-applicator can be flushed away in standard toilet facilities without difficulty.

Tampax is available in Regular and Super absorbencies.
