A doctor can gain a lot from 5 years in the Royal Navy.

As a qualified doctor, you can join the Royal Navy for 3 or 5 years on a Short Service Commission.

In that time, you'll spend up to a year practising medicine in a Naval ship.

You could have the chance of working and living overseas for a time.

And you'll be able to do your General Professional Training in one of the clinical and medical scientific disciplines at a Naval hospital or an RN establishment.

After a short Officers course at the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, and a basic course in maritime medicine at the Institute of Naval Medicine, Alverstoke, you'll normally go to sea for about 12 months.

You'll be responsible for the medical care of some 250 to 500 men in your ship (and advise the Captain on health and environmental problems).

You won't lose touch with modern medicine, as you can visit local hospitals in ports of call and use the teaching aids provided by your Naval tutor.

Postgraduate training and specialisation.

After your sea-time, career counselling will determine your postgraduate training programme.

There are opportunities for General Professional Training in preparation for a clinical career in general practice, the hospital specialities, or the medical scientific disciplines such as Aviation, Underwater, Submarine and Nuclear Medicine; or in Occupational and Community Medicine.

If you decide to transfer to a 16-year pensionable Commission, or a permanent Commission, you could move on to recognised higher training programmes which include research training and higher training posts in civilian units.

At Alverstoke the Dean of Naval Medicine co-ordinates postgraduate medical training and research.

Naval hospitals.

The two largest are at Haslar (near Portsmouth) and Plymouth.

They undertake the care of Naval personnel, their families and NHS civilians, providing a broad spectrum of clinical material. Both hospitals are recognised for higher training in the major specialities.

There is a full range of modern, technical equipment, and the nursing and paramedical staff are highly skilled.

There are smaller hospitals in Malta and Gibraltar.

Salary.

If you join us immediately after registration, your salary will be £5,997 as a Surgeon Lieutenant.

You can, however, join at any age up to 39. In that case, your postgraduate experience is taken into account, and you could join as a Surgeon Lieutenant Commander earning £8,015 a year.

If you leave at the end of your 3 year Commission, you'll receive a tax-free gratuity of £1,500, or, after 5 years, £3,000.

If you decide to stay on, you can apply for a 16-year pensionable Commission or a permanent Commission.

The salary structure is based on an analogue computed from the average earnings of general practitioners in the NHS, with an additional X factor. There is extra pay for recognised postgraduate qualifications and Senior Specialist or Consultant status.

If you're posted overseas, you can, of course, take your family with you. There are, too, generous boarding school allowances for your children, starting at £807 for your first child.

The Medical Management of Dyspepsia

Summary

Digestive disorders particularly dyspepsia, flatulence and symptoms of peptic ulcer have traditionally been treated with antacids or anticholinergic agents whose primary action is to reduce acidity.

Maxolon is an entirely different compound, both chemically and pharmacologically which acts by promoting normal gastric emptying, reducing the time during which the gastric mucosa is exposed to acid.

Maxolon has been shown to prevent the symptoms caused by oesophageal reflux, gastric stasis and regurgitation of bile and thus it provides long term relief for the dyspepsia patient who would otherwise suffer a routine of recurrent symptoms.

Introduction

Digestive disorders are one of the most common complaints encountered in General Practice, estimated at 12% of all surgery consultations. The majority of cases are acute short term conditions which, when treated symptomatically, resolve in a few days. A number of patients however, have recurrent flatulent dyspepsia, a symptom complex which has been defined as - "Epigastric discomfort after meals, a feeling of fullness so that tight clothing is loosened, eructation with temporary relief and regurgitation of sour fluid to the mouth with heartburn." 1

Radiological investigation of these patients may reveal gall stones, a hiatus hernia, a peptic ulcer or combinations of these conditions but these symptoms can also affect those with normal barium meal and cholecystogram.1

Antacids

For more than 2,000 years, antacid therapy has been employed in treating dyspepsia patients and even today antacids are rarely omitted from the treatment regime.

There is no doubt that small doses of antacid with little apparent neutralising capacity will produce pain relief, but in the treatment of flatulent dyspepsia their use is worth a re-appraisal.

Firstly the action of even the most powerful antacids is limited by stomach emptying so that they must be taken as pain arises. This can lead to considerable inconvenience, particularly for the working patient, since antacids are most effective in suspension form.<sup>2</sup>

Secondly although antacid sideeffects are usually mild they may present problems if therapy is long term. The most common complication is disturbance of bowel function.

As is well known, compounds containing magnesium have a strong laxative effect whilst others, such as aluminium hydroxide cause constipation.

The more potent antacids, such as sodium bicarbonate or calcium carbonate, are not often used, firstly because of serious side effects such as alkalosis which can arise through systemic absorption of the compounds and secondly because their effectiveness may be reduced by resulting gastric hypersecretory action or acid rebound.

In rare cases hypermagnesaemia, hypercalcaemia or hypernatraemia may result from persistent use of some commonly used compounds.3

Care needs to be taken if antacids are prescribed concurrently with other drugs as they can interfere by several different mechanisms with the actions of certain compounds, in particular tetracyclines, anticholinergics and corticosteroids.3

Anticholinergics

Anticholinergics, (e.g. belladonna derivatives) like antacids, have been used to treat gastric disorders since ancient times. As inhibitors of gastric acid secretion, they may serve as a useful adjunct to antacid therapy providing more prolonged relief from acid pain (6-8 hours). In some cases, however, anticholinergics may exacerbate dyspepsia by increasing gastric stasis and thereby lengthening the time digestive juices are in the Side-effects can also be a problem. although paradoxically unless they are produced, it cannot be assumed that a pharmacologically effective dose is being given.

The most common side-effect is dry mouth but sometimes blurred vision, difficulty in micturition or impotence may also occur.

Maxolon (metoclopramide)

Maxolon is a member of the orthopramide group of products and has been found to provide more fundamental treatment for the patient with flatulence, heartburn or dyspepsia than either antacids or anticholinergics. Its effect in promoting normal gastric emptying, 4 5 improves the efficiency and co-ordination of the gastroduodenal tract, and significantly reduces the time during which the gastric mucosa is exposed to acid.<sup>6</sup>

Side-effects are uncommon, with lassitude and drowsiness the main problems. Cessation of treatment usually ensures that these transient effects rapidly disappear.

Occasional reports of extrapyramidal reactions, often related to overdosage, have been received. Once again these effects are transient and usually respond to withdrawal of therapy.

In practice, Maxolon's maintenance of normal gastro-duodenal function means that the patient can eat a normal diet and no longer experience symptoms – "some of the patients have been on the drug for up to two years and remain symptom free."8

Published reports in over 1,100 patients 8,9,10,11 show that Maxolon has a success rate of 84% in the treatment of various digestive disorders including X-ray negative dyspepsia and symptoms of peptic

A booklet on the use of Maxolon (regd.) in the treatment of gastroduodenal conditions is available from:

Side-effects and Precautions

There are no absolute contra-indications to the use of Maxolon. Various extra-pyramidal reactions to Maxolon, usually of the dystonic type, have been reported. The incidence of these reactions in children and young adults may be increased if daily dosages higher than 0.5mg/kg body weight are administered. Reactions include: spasm of the facial muscles, trismus, rhythmic protrusion of the tongue, a bulbar type of speech, spasm of extra-ocular muscles including oculogyric crises, unnatural positioning of the head and shoulders and opisthotonous. There may be a generalised increase in muscle tone. The majority of reactions occur within 36 hours of starting treatment and the effects usually disappear within 24 hours of withdrawal of the drug. Should treatment of a reaction be required, an anti-Parkinson drug may be used. Since extra-pyramidal symptoms may occur with both Maxolon and phenothiazines, care should be exercised in the event of both drugs being prescribed concurrently.

Maxolon's action on the gastro-intestinal tract is antagonised by anticholinergics. Although animal tests in several mammalian species have shown no teratogenic effects, treatment with Maxolon is not advised during the first trimester of pregnancy.

An Outstanding Offer to 2 Young Physicians

Our offer is, we believe, unique. We aim to provide 2 bright young physicians with a 2-year comprehensive introduction to all aspects of the pharmaceutical industry, from drug discovery in the laboratory right through all stages of clinical evaluation to production and marketing.

Roughly one year will be spent at our UK Research Centre in Windlesham, and one year close by within the Medical Department of our Marketing Company in Basingstoke. However, to gain wider international experience, overseas secondment within the Lilly Organisation to Europe or the U.S.A. for a few months is also a definite possibility.

In addition to gaining an unusually wide appreciation of the pharmaceutical industry and the principles and techniques of drug discovery and development, the successful candidates will attend a number of formal training courses outside the company. In particular, the programme will be linked to the 2-year course for the new Diploma in Pharmaceutical Medicine.

Although the physicians will be free of regular Departmental responsibilities, they will have the opportunity to develop a number of small projects on their own and take on specific short-term responsibilities in a variety of different contexts. They will also be encouraged to hold a Clinical Assistantship in a relevant discipline, probably within a London Teaching Hospital.

As a result of all these measures, the successful candidates should be unusually well-equipped at the end of the 2-year period to take on senior appointments—commensurate with their interests—within our international organisation.

The candidates we seek will be in their early 30's and have a good British medical degree, at least 3 years' broad clinical experience since qualifying, and a definite interest in drug research—ideally backed by an MRCP or equivalent. In addition, they should be energetic, resourceful and adaptable.

An attractive salary will be provided, together with a car and other valuable fringe benefits, including membership of an excellent non-contributory pension and life assurance scheme. Financial assistance with relocation expenses is also available, if appropriate.

Please write to our Recruitment Adviser on this appointment for further information about the Lilly Organisation and an Application Form, or 'phone him if you would like to discuss any particular points in more detail before applying. Please quote Reference ED16.

APPOINTMENTS

Applicants for medical appointments are advised to check whether the post advertised is included in the Important Notice and to scrutinize carefully the remuneration and terms of service offered. Any member who is in doubt about these terms in relation to B.M.A. agreements should consult the Secretary of the Association.

Advertisers are reminded that the Race Relations Board insists that no descriptive term implying racial, national, or ethnic characteristics may be used in any advertisement. Further, readers are advised not to apply for any appointmen which discriminates between applicants on grounds of creed or unreasonably on grounds of sex.

HOSPITAL APPOINTMENTS

ONE DAILY FOR HYPERISION

The chances are they'll take it.

TENORMIN, a major new antihypertensive, is receiving an exceptionally favourable response from trialists throughout the UK. (writes our Medical Correspondent).

The enthusiasm of trialists is based largely on the product's simple dose without complications. Thus, Tenormin provides a simple, effective programme to encourage long-term compliance in the treatment of hypertension.

One daily

One tablet a day is seen as a singular advance in antihypertensive therapy. The effect of the drug is to lower blood pressure within 48 hours in most patients without producing postural effects.

Well tolerated

Tenormin's side effects, say the trialists, are at a new low level. Or, as one trialist puts it "..atenolo! [Tenormin] is almost as well tolerated as placebo. . . "1 coupled with a single daily dose means that patient acceptance is likely to be high.

Cardioselective

Tenormin is highly cardioselective and thus preserves the asthmatic patients beneficial response to bronchodilators. <sup>2</sup>

Well-being

Many patients on Tenormin have reported a "... feeling of well being." and, in fact, are happy to continue a normal life-style.

And that, of course, combined with Tenormin's other benefits, means fewer problems for the overworked practitioner.

Nationwide trials confirms TENORMIN'S simple effectiveness.
