HYCAL HELPS WITH THE DIETARY MANAGEMENT OF CIRRHOSIS OF THE LIVER.

It's not just a highly concentrated carbohydrate, it's also demineralised and therefore particularly suitable as a diet aid in cirrhosis of the liver.

HYCAL has been recognised as the most highly concentrated, readily assimilable fluid source of carbohydrate.

Its concentrated glucose syrup content is more palatable than other energy sources. HYCAL comes in flavours of lemon, orange, raspberry and blackcurrant. A unique feature in itself, and especially valuable for patients who soon get bored with a restricted diet.

Also, HYCAL is demineralised. So it contains a minimum level of electrolytes, such as potassium and sodium, which may be contra-indicated in cases of cirrhosis of the liver as well as renal failure.

This makes HYCAL ideal for patients with cirrhosis of the liver for whom a low sodium diet is essential.

The Borderline Substances Committee accepts that HYCAL can be regarded as a drug* for just such cases.

HYCAL has won the approval of the medical profession on its merit as a valuable aid in the sustenance of patients during the treatment not only of renal failure, but also cirrhosis of the liver.

Tropical diseases are your problem

The speed of air travel today means that tropical diseases are no longer the exclusive province of the doctor in warmer climates. Europeans may return from holidays abroad carrying a disease of which they are quite unaware until they have been at home for some time. Immigrants from tropical countries can also arrive with unfamiliar complaints which need immediate treatment. Are you equipped to diagnose them? This authoritative new atlas is designed to help you.

Alfred Jones and Warrington Yorke Professor of Tropical Medicine, Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine

Until now there has been no really comprehensive published collection of photographs on parasites and tropical diseases. This atlas therefore fills a long-standing gap in the teaching and reference material available to workers in this branch of medicine.

Completely up to date, it contains photographic material covering parasites and the ravages they inflict on man, clinical photographs of non-parasitic conditions and their causative organisms, distribution maps and tables of zoological classifications, prevalence and clinical correlations. It forms an invaluable diagnostic reference work for all practitioners in the tropics, for doctors and research workers in temperate climates who may be faced with exotic diseases, and for biologists and veterinary surgeons.

The Medical Management of Dyspepsia

Summary

Digestive disorders particularly dyspepsia, flatulence and symptoms of peptic ulcer have traditionally been treated with antacids or anticholinergic agents whose primary action is to reduce acidity.

Maxolon is an entirely different compound, both chemically and pharmacologically which acts by promoting normal gastric emptying, reducing the time during which the gastric mucosa is exposed to acid.

Maxolon has been shown to prevent the symptoms caused by oesophageal reflux, gastric stasis and regurgitation of bile and thus it provides long term relief for the dyspepsia patient who would otherwise suffer a routine of recurrent symptoms.

Introduction

Digestive disorders are one of the most common complaints encountered in General Practice, estimated at 12% of all surgery consultations. The majority of cases are acute short term conditions which, when treated symptomatically, resolve in a few days. A number of patients however, have recurrent flatulent dyspepsia, a symptom complex which has been defined as—"Epigastric discomfort after meals, a feeling of fullness so that tight clothing is loosened, eructation with temporary relief and regurgitation of sour fluid to the mouth with heartburn."¹

Radiological investigation of these patients may reveal gall stones, a hiatus hernia, a peptic ulcer or combinations of these conditions but these symptoms can also affect those with normal barium meal and cholecystogram.¹

Antacids

For more than 2,000 years, antacid therapy has been employed in treating dyspepsia patients and even today antacids are rarely omitted from the treatment regime.

There is no doubt that small doses of antacid with little apparent neutralising capacity will produce pain relief, but in the treatment of flatulent dyspepsia their use is worth a re-appraisal.

Firstly the action of even the most powerful antacids is limited by stomach emptying so that they must be taken as pain arises. This can lead to considerable inconvenience, particularly for the working patient, since antacids are most effective in suspension form.²

Secondly although antacid side-effects are usually mild they may present problems if therapy is long term. The most common complication is disturbance of bowel function.

As is well known, compounds containing magnesium have a strong laxative effect whilst others, such as aluminium hydroxide cause constipation.³

The more potent antacids, such as sodium bicarbonate or calcium carbonate, are not often used, firstly because of serious side effects such as alkalosis which can arise through systemic absorption of the compounds and secondly because their effectiveness may be reduced by resulting gastric hypersecretory action or acid rebound.

In rare cases hypermagnesaemia, hypercalcaemia or hypernatraemia may result from persistent use of some commonly used compounds.³

Care needs to be taken if antacids are prescribed concurrently with other drugs as they can interfere by several different mechanisms with the actions of certain compounds, in particular tetracyclines, anticholinergics and corticosteroids.³

Anticholinergics

Anticholinergics, (e.g. belladonna derivatives) like antacids, have been used to treat gastric disorders since ancient times. As inhibitors of gastric acid secretion, they may serve as a useful adjunct to antacid therapy providing more prolonged relief from acid pain (6-8 hours). In some cases, however, anticholinergics may exacerbate dyspepsia by increasing gastric stasis and thereby lengthening the time digestive juices are in the stomach.

Side-effects can also be a problem, although paradoxically unless they are produced, it cannot be assumed that a pharmacologically effective dose is being given.³

The most common side-effect is dry mouth but sometimes blurred vision, difficulty in micturition or impotence may also occur.³

Maxolon (metoclopramide)

Maxolon is a member of the orthopramide group of products and has been found to provide more fundamental treatment for the patient with flatulence, heartburn or dyspepsia than either antacids or anticholinergics. Its effect in promoting normal gastric emptying,^{4 5} improves the efficiency and co-ordination of the gastro-duodenal tract, and significantly reduces the time during which the gastric mucosa is exposed to acid.⁶

Side-effects are uncommon, with lassitude and drowsiness the main problems. Cessation of treatment usually ensures that these transient effects rapidly disappear.

Occasional reports of extra-pyramidal reactions, often related to overdosage, have been received. Once again these effects are transient and usually respond to withdrawal of therapy.⁷

In practice, Maxolon's maintenance of normal gastro-duodenal function means that the patient can eat a normal diet and no longer experience symptoms—"some of the patients have been on the drug for up to two years and remain symptom free."⁸

Published reports in over 1,100 patients^{8, 9, 10, 11} show that Maxolon has a success rate of 84% in the treatment of various digestive disorders including X-ray negative dyspepsia and symptoms of peptic ulcer.

A booklet on the use of Maxolon (regd.) in the treatment of gastro-duodenal conditions is available from:

Beecham Research Laboratories, Freeport, Brentford, Middx. TW8 9BD.

Side-effects and Precautions

There are no absolute contra-indications to the use of Maxolon. Various extra-pyramidal reactions to Maxolon, usually of the dystonic type, have been reported. The incidence of these reactions in children and young adults may be increased if daily dosages higher than 0.5mg/kg body weight are administered. Reactions include: spasm of the facial muscles, trismus, rhythmic protrusion of the tongue, a bulbar type of speech, spasm of extra-ocular muscles including oculogyric crises, unnatural positioning of the head and shoulders and opisthotonus. There may be a generalised increase in muscle tone. The majority of reactions occur within 36 hours of starting treatment and the effects usually disappear within 24 hours of withdrawal of the drug. Should treatment of a reaction be required, an anti-Parkinson drug may be used. Since extra-pyramidal symptoms may occur with both Maxolon and phenothiazines, care should be exercised in the event of both drugs being prescribed concurrently.

Maxolon's action on the gastro-intestinal tract is antagonised by anticholinergics. Although animal tests in several mammalian species have shown no teratogenic effects, treatment with Maxolon is not advised during the first trimester of pregnancy.

A doctor can gain a lot from 5 years in the Royal Navy.

As a qualified doctor, you can join the Royal Navy for 3 or 5 years on a Short Service Commission.

In that time, you'll spend up to a year practising medicine in a Naval ship.

You could have the chance of working and living overseas for a time.

And you'll be able to do your General Professional Training in one of the clinical and medical scientific disciplines at a Naval hospital or an RN establishment.

At sea.

After a short Officers course at the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, and a basic course in maritime medicine at the Institute of Naval Medicine, Alverstoke, you'll normally go to sea for about 12 months.

You'll be responsible for the medical care of some 250 to 500 men in your ship (and advise the Captain on health and environmental problems).

You won't lose touch with modern medicine, as you can visit local hospitals in ports of call and use the teaching aids provided by your Naval tutor.

Postgraduate training and specialisation.

After your sea-time, career counselling will determine your postgraduate training programme.

There are opportunities for General Professional Training in preparation for a clinical career in general practice, the hospital specialities, or the medical scientific disciplines such as Aviation, Underwater, Submarine and Nuclear Medicine; or in Occupational and Community Medicine.

If you decide to transfer to a 16-year pensionable Commission, or a permanent Commission, you could move on to recognised higher training programmes which include research training and higher training posts in civilian units.

At Alverstoke, the Dean of Naval Medicine co-ordinates postgraduate medical training and research.

Naval hospitals.

The two largest are at Haslar (near Portsmouth) and Plymouth.

They undertake the care of Naval personnel, their families and NHS civilians, providing a broad spectrum of clinical material. Both hospitals are recognised for higher training in the major specialities.

There is a full range of modern, technical equipment, and the nursing and paramedical staff are highly skilled.

There are smaller hospitals in Malta and Gibraltar.

Salary.

If you join us immediately after registration, your salary will be £5,997 as a Surgeon Lieutenant.

You can, however, join at any age up to 39. In that case, your postgraduate experience is taken into account, and you could join as a Surgeon Lieutenant Commander earning £8,015 a year.

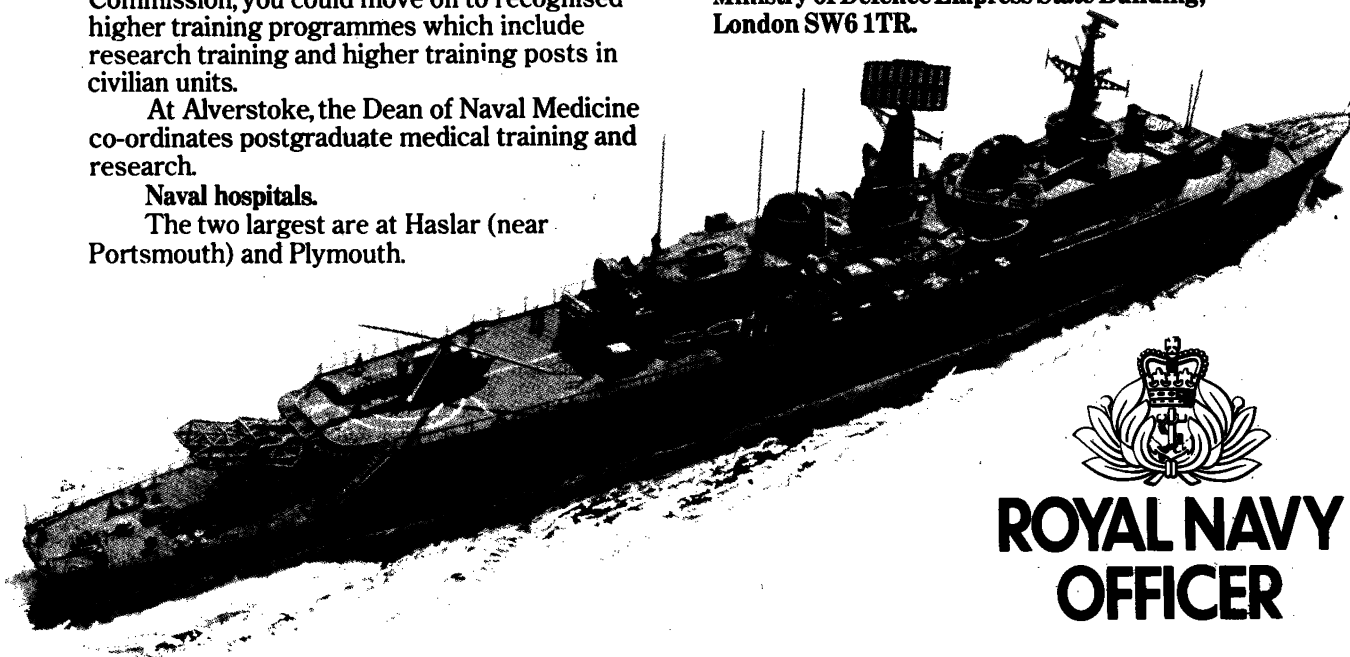

If you leave at the end of your 3 year Commission, you'll receive a tax-free gratuity of £1,500, or, after 5 years, £3,000.

If you decide to stay on, you can apply for a 16-year pensionable Commission or a permanent Commission.

The salary structure is based on an analogue computed from the average earnings of general practitioners in the NHS, with an additional X factor. There is extra pay for recognised postgraduate qualifications and Senior Specialist or Consultant status.

If you're posted overseas, you can, of course, take your family with you. There are, too, generous boarding school allowances for your children, starting at £807 for your first child.

For more information, write to Surgeon Commander H.B. Blackstone, MRCS, LRCP, MRCGP, RN, (724 FM21), Medical Directorate General (Navy), Ministry of Defence Empress State Building, London SW6 1TR.

APPOINTMENTS

Applicants for medical appointments are advised to check whether the post advertised is included in the Important Notice and to scrutinize carefully the remuneration and terms of service offered. Any member who is in doubt about these terms in relation to B.M.A. agreements should consult the Secretary of the Association.

Advertisers are reminded that the Race Relations Board insists that no descriptive term implying racial, national, or ethnic characteristics may be used in any advertisement. Further, readers are advised not to apply for any appointment which discriminates between applicants on grounds of creed or unreasonably on grounds of sex.

HOSPITAL APPOINTMENTS

Applicants should state names, address, age, nationality, and qualifications, and enclose (unless otherwise specified) one copy of each of three recent testimonials, with a short statement of experience and appointments held. Applications should be sent at once if no closing date is given: Canvassing disqualifies (Statutory Instrument, 1974, No. 361).

All National Health Service hospital appointments are in accordance with the Terms and Conditions of Service of Hospital Medical Staff.

Further details concerning standards of residential accommodation, telephone charges, removal allowances, study leave and other matters should be obtained from the Hospital Secretary; or by B.M.A. members from the Secretary, British Medical Association.

In particular, they will find full details of facilities provided in most hospitals in the United Kingdom in the current edition of the Hospital Gazetteer. If such details are not included members are advised to consult the Secretary of the B.M.A.

Applicants requiring hospital married accommodation are strongly advised to obtain, prior to interview, clarification in writing from the employing authority as to whether such accommodation will be available on appointment.

Advertisements for post-registration house officers, senior house officers and registrars should state clearly whether the post is resident, i.e. compulsorily resident.

In all advertisements grade should be clearly indicated. Normally a consultant vacancy must be advertised as (a) part-time with the number of sessions clearly stated, or (b) whole-time with the option of maximum part-time.

In the view of the B.M.A. an advertiser should not insist on possession of English higher qualifications in preference to Scottish or Irish qualifications (or vice versa).

PERSONAL

DID YOU KNOW that there are handicapped children needing homes? Children like Theresa who is 11 years and of mixed race whose handicap is complete deafness. She is charming and an affectionate little girl who enjoys her boarding school, but who needs a family for some weekends and holidays. And John who is 12 years, friendly and cheerful, good with other children and adults, but in spite of his years is educationally backward, although he is good at sports. John has no parental contact, and would like to live with a family. And Melanie who is small and petite for her 5 years, but who is a high grade mongol. She is an active child who is popular with the children and staff of the children's home, and is able to communicate reasonably well. And Alan 10 years who needs more help because he is educationally below average, partially deaf and poorly sighted. He seems to get on well with adults and children and likes to give and receive plenty of affection. All these children would learn to cope so much better

Sinequan^{*}

brand of doxepin *Trade Mark

greater effect in depression/anxiety ...less effect on the cardiovascular system

Sinequan is less likely than either imipramine or amitriptyline to cause cardiac conduction defects, both at therapeutic doses and in overdoses.¹

Unlike amitriptyline and imipramine, Sinequan at the normal clinical dosage can be given with guanethidine and related compounds without blocking the anti-hypertensive effect.²

Sinequan will not pose the problems of euphoria and dependence. Only one case of euphoria was observed in 1,706 patients receiving Sinequan for up to 22 months.²

Unlike the phenothiazines, Sinequan has no tendency to cause opacities of the lens or cornea after long-term usage.²

Sinequan will not normally exert any appreciable effect on blood pressure or pulse rate. This holds true even in the elderly who often have exaggerated adverse reactions to psychotropic drugs.²

Daily Tenormin

ONE DAILY FOR HYPERTENSION

The chances are they'll take it.

TENORMIN, a major new antihypertensive, is receiving an exceptionally favourable response from trialists throughout the UK. (writes our Medical Correspondent).

The enthusiasm of trialists is based largely on the product's simple dose without complications. Thus, Tenormin provides a simple, effective programme to encourage long-term compliance in the treatment of hypertension.

One daily

One tablet a day is seen as a singular advance in antihypertensive therapy. The effect of the drug is to lower blood pressure within 48 hours in most patients without producing postural effects.

4. Brit. Med. J. (1975), 4, 133-135
5. Brit. Med. J. (1976), 2, 235

Well tolerated

Tenormin's side effects, say the trialists, are at a new low level. Or, as one trialist puts it "...atenolol [Tenormin] is almost as well tolerated as placebo. . ."¹ coupled with a single daily dose means that patient acceptance is likely to be high.

Cardioselective

Tenormin is highly cardioselective and thus preserves the asthmatic patients beneficial response to bronchodilators.²

Well-being

Many patients on Tenormin have reported a "...feeling of well being..."³ and, in fact, are happy to continue a normal life-style.

And that, of course, combined with Tenormin's other benefits, means fewer problems for the overworked practitioner.

Nationwide trials confirms TENORMIN'S simple effectiveness.
