PROBLEMS OF CHILDHOOD

From the British Medical Journal

While in paediatrics the spotlight has, perhaps, swung recently on to behavioural and psychological aspects of child development, much of the clinician's time is still spent with acute and chronic physical disorders. Both these aspects of medical problems in childhood were reviewed in a series of BMJ articles published early in 1976, and these have now been collected together after further revision by their authors. We hope the collection will prove useful to doctors at all stages of their careers: for children occupy a great deal of the time of every general practitioner, and confidence in their care demands both experience and knowledge.

A doctor can gain a lot from 5 years in the Royal Navy.

As a qualified doctor, you can join the Royal Navy for 3 or 5 years on a Short Service Commission.

In that time, you'll spend up to a year practising medicine in a Naval ship.

You could have the chance of working and living overseas for a time.

And you'll be able to do your General Professional Training in one of the clinical and medical scientific disciplines at a Naval hospital or an RN establishment.

At sea.

After a short Officers course at the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, and a basic course in maritime medicine at the Institute of Naval Medicine, Alverstoke, you'll normally go to sea for about 12 months.

You'll be responsible for the medical care of some 250 to 500 men in your ship (and advise the Captain on health and environmental problems).

You won't lose touch with modern medicine, as you can visit local hospitals in ports of call and use the teaching aids provided by your Naval tutor.

Postgraduate training and specialisation.

After your sea-time, career counselling will determine your postgraduate training programme.

There are opportunities for General Professional Training in preparation for a clinical career in general practice, the hospital specialities, or the medical scientific disciplines such as Aviation, Underwater, Submarine and Nuclear Medicine; or in Occupational and Community Medicine.

If you decide to transfer to a 16-year pensionable Commission, or a permanent Commission, you could move on to recognised higher training programmes which include research training and higher training posts in civilian units.

At Alverstoke, the Dean of Naval Medicine co-ordinates postgraduate medical training and research.

Naval hospitals.

The two largest Naval hospitals are at Haslar (near Portsmouth) and Plymouth.

They undertake the care of Naval personnel, their families and NHS civilians, providing a broad spectrum of clinical material. Both hospitals are recognised for higher training in the major specialities.

There is a full range of modern technical equipment, and the nursing and paramedical staff are highly skilled.

There are smaller hospitals in Malta and Gibraltar.

Salary.

If you join us immediately after registration, your salary will be £5,997 as a Surgeon Lieutenant.

You can, however, join at any age up to 39. In that case, your postgraduate experience is taken into account, and you could join as a Surgeon Lieutenant Commander earning £8,015 a year.

If you leave at the end of your 3 year Commission, you'll receive a tax-free gratuity of £1,500, or, after 5 years, £3,000.

If you decide to stay on, you can apply for a 16-year pensionable Commission or a permanent Commission.

The salary structure is based on an analogue computed from the average earnings of general practitioners in the NHS, with an additional X-factor. There is extra pay for recognised postgraduate qualifications and Senior Specialist or Consultant status.

If you're posted overseas, you can, of course, take your family with you. There are, too, generous boarding school allowances for your children.

For more information, write to Surgeon Commander H.B. Blackstone, MRCS, LRCP, MRCGP, RN, (724GP2), Medical Directorate General (Navy), Ministry of Defence, Empress State Building, London SW6 1TR.

Any member who is in doubt about these terms in relation to B.M.A. agreements should consult the Secretary of the Association.

Advertisers are reminded that the Race Relations Board insists that no descriptive term implying racial, national, or ethnic characteristics may be used in any advertisement. Further, readers are advised not to apply for any appointment which discriminates between applicants on grounds of creed or unreasonably on grounds of sex.

HOSPITAL APPOINTMENTS

Applicants should state names, address, age, nationality, and qualifications, and enclose (unless otherwise specified) one copy of each of three recent testimonials, with a short statement of experience and appointments held.
