Why is Finland no longer the world's black spot for heart attacks?

The prevalence of CHD has been greater in Finland than in any other country – with the highest rates in the county of North Karelia.

Because of this, the North Karelia Project was initiated – a comprehensive five-year experiment attempting to control cardiovascular diseases with a community programme.

By the end of the project, the levels of the 3 main risk factors for CHD among North Karelians were markedly reduced.

Overall, the mean net reduction in the estimated CHD risk was significant – 17.4% among men, 11.5% among women.*

In this multi-factorial approach, diet played its own important role. The programme recommended a reduction in the consumption of foods with a high saturated fat content. Instead, foods of a high polyunsaturate content were eaten.

With the current high levels of heart disease in Britain, it's obviously time the British changed to healthier habits.

In all this, Flora margarine can make a positive contribution.

Flora is made with pure sunflower oil, so it's high in polyunsaturates.

Eaten as part of a properly balanced diet and combined with a sensible health routine, Flora can help your heart-risk patients enjoy an altogether fitter, healthier lifestyle.

Flora. High in polyunsaturates.

From theory

A Wellcome discovery made it possible

Epoprostenol is a naturally occurring prostaglandin, which prevents platelets sticking to vessel walls and to each other.

The discovery of epoprostenol (or prostacyclin as it was called at the time) was a significant achievement of Wellcome prostaglandin research – a discovery which has since generated immense interest.

In 1975, Dr John Vane and colleagues embarked on a line of research to determine whether vessel walls synthesised thromboxane A₂ (TXA₂). The latter had already been shown to cause platelet aggregation and vasoconstriction.

In fact, Vane et al disproved the synthesis theory, but observed that the endoperoxide precursor of TXA₂ was being converted into another, unknown substance.

Further work showed this substance to be the biological counterpart of TXA₂, epoprostenol. It relaxed vessel walls and was found to be the most potent inhibitor of platelet aggregation known. So powerful, in fact, that it can also disaggregate platelet clumps.

For this, and other discoveries in the field of prostaglandins and related substances, Dr. Vane shared the 1982 Nobel Prize for Medicine.

Flolan is the synthetic sodium salt of epoprostenol.

FLOLAN Prescribing Information

Presentation In each pack is a vial containing 500 µg freeze-dried epoprostenol sodium, plus a 50 ml vial of sterile diluent containing Sodium Chloride BP 0.147% w/v and Glycine BP 0.188% w/v in clear solution.

Uses Flolan inhibits platelet aggregation. It is indicated for the preservation of platelet numbers and function during cardiopulmonary bypass and charcoal haemoperfusion, and as an alternative to heparin during renal dialysis.

Dosage and administration Flolan is suitable for continuous infusion only, either intravascularly or into the blood supplying the extracorporeal circulation.

The dosage schedule varies according to the indication. For details see Data Sheet or pack leaflet.

Reconstitution must be performed aseptically, using only the diluent provided. For the method of reconstitution see Data Sheet or pack leaflet.

Contra-indications No recognised contra-indications.

Precautions Flolan should not be used to replace heparin in cardiopulmonary bypass or charcoal haemoperfusion but can do so in renal dialysis. However, standard anti-coagulant monitoring is advisable when concomitant anti-coagulants are administered. Haemorrhagic complication should be considered in patients with spontaneous or

Successful antibiotic therapy when host defences are impaired

When Disease Impairs

Neoplastic disease, old age and malnutrition are amongst the factors which may lead to a severe impairment of a patient's natural resistance to infection. The neutropenic patient is unable to mount an adequate inflammatory response at the site of infection and the slightest area of sepsis has the potential for dissemination, often with lethal results.

Intravenous antibiotics must be started on the suspicion of infection. The choice of antimicrobial depends on the likely pathogenic spectrum and the patient's hypersensitivity characteristics. In addition, the efficacy of certain antimicrobials depends on the host's neutrophils, for example aminoglycosides are less effective in the neutropenic patient.¹

The Role of Ticar

Ticar, unlike the aminoglycosides, is not dependent on an adequate neutrophil count for its bactericidal activity¹ (Fig. 1).

In the severely ill, this decisive activity, especially when enhanced in synergistic combination with an aminoglycoside, offers a clinically successful outcome.² The wide combined spectrum of Ticar with an aminoglycoside is shown in Fig. 2.

Additionally, Ticar shares the safety of the penicillins and therefore poses few problems of toxicity to the already compromised patients.³

When Therapy Impairs

Radiotherapy, anti-neoplastic chemotherapy and immunosuppressive drugs may also reduce the patient's ability to cope with infection by causing neutropenia or impairing neutrophil function,⁴ thus rendering life threatening, those infections which would normally be trivial.

Prescribing Information: Ticar Infusion: Infusion bottles containing 5g ticarcillin as ticarcillin disodium together with Water for Injections B.P. and sterile transfer needles in packs of 4. (Price: £11.48 per bottle). Ticar 5g, 3g and 1g Vials: Vials containing 5g, 3g or 1g ticarcillin as ticarcillin disodium, in packs of 4 (Price: £9.76 per vial), packs of 6 (Price: £5.85 per vial) and packs of 10 (Price: £2.40 per vial) respectively. Prices correct March, 1982. Favourable Hospital Rates are available from the Company. Dosage: ALL DOSAGES BELOW APPEAR AS DAILY TOTALS, WHICH SHOULD BE DIVIDED AND USUALLY GIVEN AT 4-8 HOURLY INTERVALS. Normal Recommended dosage: Adults 15-20g; Children 200-300mg/kg. Acute uncomplicated UTI: Adults 3-4g; Children 50-100mg/kg. Ticar can be successfully given to patients with renal insufficiency. Full recommendations are given on the data sheet. Preparation and Administration See package enclosure leaflet for full details of preparation. When administered intravenously Ticar should be given by slow injection (3-4 minutes) or infusion over e.g. 30-40 minutes (i.e. at a rate of approximately 50 drops per minute). Contra-indication Penicillin hypersensitivity. Side-effects Side-effects are uncommon and typical of other injectable penicillins. If pain at the intramuscular injection site is troublesome the vial contents may be dissolved in 0.5% lignocaine hydrochloride solution. In rare cases spontaneous skin and mucous membrane haemorrhages due to interference with normal clotting mechanisms have been reported. Precautions Use of Ticar at less than recommended dosages may permit multiplication of resistant strains of bacteria especially of Pseudomonas. In treating patients on sodium restriction it should be noted that each 1g vial of Ticar contains 5.3 mmol of sodium (approx.) each 3g vial contains 16.0 mmol of sodium (approx.) and each 5g vial contains 26.7 mmol of sodium (approx.). to theatre.

Therapeutic roles – now and to come

In the operating theatre, Flolan is of particular benefit in extracorporeal circulation procedures, for example, cardiopulmonary bypass, renal haemodialysis and charcoal haemoperfusion. In such circuits, blood is brought into contact with artificial surfaces, which can cause activation, aggregation and consumption of platelets.

The resulting clumps may circulate in the body as microaggregates and can result in renal and cerebral impairment. Platelets also aggregate onto membranes and filters in the circuit, and slow the filtration rate.

Flolan helps prevent these problems by inhibiting aggregation. Fewer platelets stick to the artificial surfaces, more intact platelets return to the body, and the risk of circulatory micro-aggregates is significantly reduced.

Flolan is an exciting and continuing development which may also show great promise in the treatment of vascular and other diseases.

Wellcome is at work exploring its full potential.

Flolan and other vasodilators may augment each other's hypotensive effects.

The effects of Flolan on heart rate may be masked by concomitant use of drugs which affect cardiovascular reflexes.

If excessive hypotension occurs, the dose should be reduced or the infusion discontinued.

The hypotensive effect of Flolan may be enhanced by the use of acetate buffer in the dialysis bath during renal dialysis.

Elevated serum glucose levels have been reported occasionally.

Use in pregnancy and lactation The potential benefits must be weighed against the risks.

Side- and adverse effects Facial flushing is common. Headache and gastro-intestinal symptoms including nausea, vomiting and abdominal colic have occurred. Bradycardia associated with a considerable fall in systolic and diastolic blood pressure has followed a dose of 30 ng/kg/min in healthy conscious volunteers. Bradycardia accompanied by pallor, nausea, sweating, and sometimes abdominal discomfort and orthostatic hypotension, has occurred in healthy volunteers at doses greater than 5 ng/kg/min.

In ENT, staphylococcal infections frequently pose a serious threat which may destroy the benefits of surgery. Even as secondary pathogens staphylococci can jeopardise treatment by destroying non-penicillinase stable antibiotics (such as Penicillin V or G and ampicillin).

Floxapen offers prompt decisive treatment in primary or secondary staphylococcal infection.

Floxapen ensures bactericidal activity against virtually all staphylococci,¹ has excellent oral absorption² and is well tolerated. At the recommended dosages Floxapen is also active against pneumococci and Streptococcus pyogenes and consequently offers an effective treatment for Gram-positive infections involving staphylococci.

When staphylococci are involved or suspected – make Floxapen part of the treatment.

Motilium[®]

Trademark (domperidone)

controls nausea and vomiting without central effects

Motilium[®], a potent peripherally acting dopamine antagonist, achieves a high degree of efficacy through a dual mode of action.

Firstly Motilium[®] suppresses the emetic response to toxic substances in the blood by blocking the effects of dopamine released within the chemoreceptor trigger zone. Motilium[®] does not cross the blood brain barrier and therefore does not interfere with the nigrostriatal and mesolimbic systems.

Secondly Motilium[®] possesses gastrokinetic properties. Acting locally on the upper gastro-intestinal tract Motilium[®] increases lower oesophageal sphincter pressure and improves delayed gastric emptying.

The unique mode of action of Motilium[®] combines high efficacy in controlling nausea and vomiting with freedom from central side effects.

Long term activity in arthritis

IN the treatment of arthritis, relief of pain and inflammation is a major objective. The ultimate aim, however, is to restore mobility lost through painful, stiffened joints. This requires long-term, consistently effective control of pain and inflammation. Continuity of treatment is fundamental to the successful management of arthritis.

PRODUCT of Boots Research, Froben is designed for the long-term treatment of arthritis. Rapidly absorbed, it quickly reaches the affected joints bringing pain and inflammation firmly under control and maintaining that control over long periods of treatment. Drug accumulation does not occur and Froben is well tolerated by most patients. Froben is suitable for continuous treatment. Which is why it is effective.

SUITABLE for most arthritic patients, Froben is particularly valuable for those who need a high level of relief from pain and inflammation. Froben will provide that extra relief without the high incidence of side-effects often associated with the more potent of the anti-arthritic agents.

FROBEN is an excellent anti-arthritic with which to start treatment. It is an excellent antiarthritic with which to continue treatment. With Froben, your arthritic patients will receive the full benefit of continuous, consistent long-term therapy.

Transiderm-Nitro[®]

glyceryl trinitrate Average absorption rate: 5mg in 24 hours

New system

24 hour control of angina pectoris through the skin

Prescribing information Presentation Transiderm-Nitro is a transdermal drug delivery system, comprising a self-adhesive, pink-coloured patch, containing a drug reservoir of glyceryl trinitrate BP. The Transiderm-Nitro patch has a contact surface measuring 10cm², and a glyceryl trinitrate content of 25mg. Indication Prophylactic treatment of attacks of angina pectoris, as monotherapy or in combination with other anti-anginal agents. Mode of action Transiderm-Nitro is a novel drug delivery system designed to achieve a prolonged and constant release of glyceryl trinitrate. Glyceryl trinitrate acts by venous and arterial vasodilatation and redistribution of myocardial blood flow. Following the application of Transiderm-Nitro the plasma level of glyceryl trinitrate reaches a constant plateau within two hours, which is maintained for at least 24 hours. During the first hour after removal of the patch the plasma level falls rapidly. Dosage and administration One patch is to be applied every 24 hours. The average total amount of glyceryl trinitrate absorbed per patch in 24 hours is 5mg. It is recommended that the patch is applied to the lateral chest wall. The patch should be removed after 24 hours, and the replacement patch applied to a new area of skin. Allow several days to elapse before applying a fresh patch to the same area of skin. If acute attacks of angina pectoris occur, rapid acting nitrate preparations may be required. Efficacy and tolerability beyond 28 days' therapy have yet to be established. Side-effects Headache may occur and usually regresses after a few days. Reflex tachycardia can be controlled by concomitant treatment with a beta-blocker. Postural hypotension, nausea and dizziness occur rarely. Allergic skin reactions, a local mild itching or burning sensation may occasionally occur. Upon removal of the patch, any slight reddening of the skin will usually disappear in a few hours. Precautions In recent myocardial infarction or acute heart failure, Transiderm-Nitro should be employed only under careful clinical surveillance. As with all anti-anginal nitrate preparations, withdrawal of treatment should be gradual, by replacement with decreasing doses of long-acting oral nitrates. Contra-indications Transiderm-Nitro should not be prescribed to patients hypersensitive to nitrates, or in severe hypotension. Marked anaemia, increased intraocular pressure or intracranial pressure. Pregnancy As with all drugs, Transiderm-Nitro should not be prescribed during pregnancy, particularly during the first trimester, unless there are compelling reasons for doing so. Treatment of overdosage High doses of glyceryl trinitrate are known to cause pronounced systemic side-effects, e.g. a marked fall in blood pressure or collapse. However, with Transiderm-Nitro, the rate controlling membrane will reduce the likelihood of overdosage occurring. In contrast to long-acting oral nitrate preparations, the effect of Transiderm-Nitro can be rapidly terminated simply by removing the system. Any fall in blood pressure or signs of collapse that may occur, may be managed by resuscitative measures. Further information Transiderm-Nitro gives a controlled release of glyceryl trinitrate over at least 24 hours and thereby avoids high peaks of blood levels, minimising the incidence of side-effects. Although glyceryl trinitrate is volatile, resulting, in the case of most products, in loss of the drug after relatively short storage, the design of the Transiderm-Nitro patch ensures that the dosage to the patient is maintained even after 2 years' storage. Packs and price Boxes of 30 patches. NOTICES TO READERS

APPOINTMENTS

Applicants for medical appointments are advised to check whether the post advertised is included in the Important Notice and to examine carefully the remuneration and terms of service offered. Any member who is in doubt about these terms in relation to BMA agreements should consult the secretary of the British Medical Association.

DISCRIMINATION

Attention is drawn to the following decision of the BMA Council: "That no advertisements should be accepted that are in any way discriminatory within the context of the Race Relations Act and the Sex Discrimination Act." Thus the BMJ will not accept advertisements that indicate or may reasonably be understood to indicate an intention to discriminate on grounds of sex, colour, race, nationality, or ethnic or national origins unless specifically exempt under the relevant statute.

Superannuation: Members who require advice on superannuation arrangements for prospective employment should write to the secretary of the BMA.

Unemployment: The BMA is collecting information about unemployment: doctors, particularly junior doctors, actively seeking work but who have been unemployed for more than three months are asked to write in confidence to the secretary of the BMA.

Locum appointments: There are dangers in accepting long term or undefined locum appointments which may result in doctors disqualifying themselves from the advantages of some of the terms and conditions of service. Members contemplating such posts should contact the secretary of the BMA for advice.

HOSPITAL POSTS

Training grades

Applicants for the appointments of house officer, senior house officer, registrar and senior registrar are reminded that the national terms and conditions of service request employing authorities to issue a standard model contract and full job description. Tenancy or licence agreements and an inventory of property should be issued for doctors occupying authority accommodations. This will ensure that the applicant has full details of the appointment before interview. Authorities have also been requested to organise visits for intending applicants, who are advised to satisfy themselves, preferably in writing with the details provided before attending an interview or accepting an appointment.

Doctors applying for registrar and senior registrar grade posts are advised to ascertain the status of those posts for the purpose of higher professional training.

Further details about standards of residential accommodation, charges for voluntary residence, telephone charges, removal allowances, study leave, superannuation position on leaving the NHS, including restrictions on the refund of contributions, and other matters should be obtained from the hospital administrator or by BMA members from the secretary of the BMA.

House officer: Each post in this grade shall be tenable for six months. £6560 per annum for the posts held during the first year; £6980 per annum for posts held during the second year; £7400 per annum for posts held during the third and subsequent years subject to full registration.

Senior house officer: £8170 + £550(1) to £8720 + £540(1) to £9260.

Registrar: £9260 + 470 (2) to £10670 + £550 (1) to £11220.

On assimilation for the scale for registrars, one increment and one only shall be given for any year or part of a year in excess of two spent previously in the senior house officer grade.

Senior registrar: £10670 + £550 (1) to £11220 + £560 (1) to £11780 + £550 (1) to £12330 + £560 (1) to £12890 + £550 (1) to £13440.

On first appointment as senior registrar one increment should be given for each year or part of a year in excess of three spent as a registrar up to a maximum of two increments. The conditions of senior registrar appointments are dealt with in DHSS circular HC(82)10.

Job descriptions: Doctors applying for a post are advised to ask the health authority for a job description and authorities are asked to state in their advertisements from whom this information can be obtained.

Non-training grades

Warning on contracts: The CCHMS has agreed with the DHSS a model form of contract to be issued to all consultants and associate specialists. Although the DHSS has recommended this model to all RHAs, in some instances individual regions have amended the model, thereby changing important clauses. The BMA advises members not to sign a contract if it deviates from the model contained in PM(79) 11 and if in any doubt suggests that they contact their BMA regional office.

Criteria are laid down for determining the commencing salaries of consultants and any members who experience difficulty in this respect are advised to seek the advice of the secretary of the association.

Consultants: According to DHSS circular HC(82)10, which deals with the appointment of consultants and senior registrars, doctors who are able to work only part time for personal reasons, such as domestic responsibilities, disability, or ill health, are entitled to apply for vacancies and advertised posts should be read as including this condition.

Advertisements should state the number of notional half days offered for part time consultant appointment or, for whole time appointments, offer a maximum part time option. In the view of the BMA an advertiser should not insist on possession of an English higher qualification in preference to Scottish or Irish qualifications (or vice versa).

Consultant salary scale: £18440 + £1300(1) to £19740 + £1310(2) to £22360 + £1300(1) to £23660

Part time medical officer grade – (clinical assistant): Salary scale: £1390 a year for each weekly notional half day.

Hospital practitioner grade: Salary scale: A sliding scale from £1390 to £1850 a year for each weekly notional half day.

Associate specialist: Salary scale: £11240 + £1200(6) to £18440.

COMMUNITY MEDICINE

Specialists in community medicine: £18440 + £1300(1) to £19740 + £1310(2) to £22360 + £1300(1) to £23660.

National scales for district medical officer, regional medical officers and chief administrative medical officers vary according to authority. Details may be obtained from the secretary of the BMA.

Training grades: £9260 to £13440.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

Clinical medical officer: National salary scales are £9780 to £13540 per annum.

Senior clinical medical officer: National salary scales are £13910 to £19980.

In the BMA's view trainees in community medicine should be offered a choice of options for academic training including full time or part time MSC courses, block release "consortium" courses, or locally supervised private study arrangements. Trainees who are not offered their preferred option are advised to contact the association for advice.

GENERAL PRACTICE

Principals providing general medical services in the NHS are independent contractors and their remuneration in England and Wales is governed by the Statement of fees and allowances payable to general medical practitioners in England and Wales. (Known as the red book, it is issued by the Department of Health and Social Security). Scotland and Northern Ireland have similar but separate arrangements. Applicants for vacancies as principals, trainees, or assistants in general practice requiring advice may consult the BMA or the appropriate local medical committee.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

Senior Medical Adviser Who Wants To Be Kept Busy

A major, research based, pharmaceutical company seeks a medical adviser with sound experience to take up a SENIOR vacancy in late Phase II and Phase III through to PLA's.

The hectic current work load is shared by the Medical Director (to whom the job reports), three doctors of mixed experience and even more CRA's. This happy team is pulling well but the workload needs sharing further and help is needed bringing on the newcomers to total independence. Abrasive personalities are unwelcome.

The range of products is already broadening in Phase III and will inevitably broaden even more.
This is a company commitment. Flexibility of mind and a preparedness to change will be as essential as evidence that the new man or woman can create proper objectives and achieve them.

The position is new, the location popular, the company well respected and its research highly admired. The salary is good and sufficiently flexible to interest a wide variety of experienced medical advisers. Other benefits rate "good" to "excellent".

Enquirers might get a good headstart if they indicate at the beginning (briefly) their experience and achievements. Please cite ref:
